FOREWORD

The College Annual has won its place. In this day of visual appeal, there is a natural call for some publication that shall give an illustrated presentation of the various aspects of the life of the College. The Annual well meets this demand, and probably gives the most vivid and comprehensive record available, especially of student activities. No other publication of the College, therefore, is likely to make so satisfactory a Memory Book for the student. The Annual has also often served, no doubt, to introduce prospective students to the inner life of the College as nothing else could. In both ways the Annual meets real College interests.

The Origin of the Oberlin Spirit

Could John Frederick Oberlin know of the present-day college which is proud to bear his name, he might recognize many of his own advanced ideas of more than a century ago. Perhaps he would "see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." Though Oberlin College, these eighty years, has outgrown even the fondest dreams of its founders in its great gains in equipment and in world-wide influence, it still remains distinctive and unique among colleges. Many of the persistent ideals of the institution can be traced back to our patron saint of long ago, through the medium of the little story of his life which "Father Shipherd" found in his Sunday-school library in Elyria.

Oberlin's Church at Waldesbach

In the reincarnation here in Oberlin of much of John Frederick Oberlin's spirit, we see a real immortality of influence not without an interesting touch of the romantic. "The strangest dream which could come to him," said his biographer, Dr. Beard, "would have been that his name would wing its way from the remote mountain tops across the continent of Europe, span the wide sea into the new world which he had once hoped to enter, and inscribe itself upon one of the most potential of America's institutions of higher learning, so many of whose sons, in sympathy with his ideas of brotherhood, its obligations and its needs, seem to have caught his spirit of noble service, and thus to give the college which bears his name its special distinction."

Of no college is it truer than of Oberlin, that her graduates are less ambitious to do something in the world than they are to do something for the world. This ideal of education for power, but power for service, has persisted from the beginning; and it was the key-note of John Frederick's career. Nothing could tempt him away from the sacrificial joys of missionary service. This was once his reply to a generous call back to the city: "No, the best work for me is where I can do the most good with the least recompense." It is not surprising that with such a heritage Oberlin leads all other American colleges in the number of young men and women it sends to the foreign mission field.

The early opposition to human slavery at Oberlin College was but one phase of the "reverence for personality" which has always been strong among us. We find this also to have been remarkably true of the man Oberlin. He was so keenly sympathetic with the slave, that he would use neither coffee nor sugar in his household because, as he said, "every granule of it is tainted with the blood of the unhappy slave."

The familiar Oberlin ideals of democracy and brotherhood find their antecedents clearly in the teachings and practice of our Alsatian seer. Though a gentleman both by instinct and by training, he was no aristocrat. He practiced social democracy and treated rich and poor alike. When the French Assembly, before the Revolution, framed the famous "Declaration of the Rights of Man," Oberlin prescribed it to be memorized by all his young people, and they recited it weekly. At a certain mayor's inauguration he was bold enough to pray "that the immense giants of the aristocracy might be crushed; and when a little later under Robespierre, Christian worship in the churches was forbidden, Oberlin took out a mechanic's license and organized a club which he named "The Society of the People." "I desire," said he, "that my people should be animated by truly Republican sentiments." Oberlin College has never been snobbish. It has ever recognized essential manliness, even under the rough; and, true to its namesake, has never harbored social distinctions of any sort. Of no other college in the world can it be said that for eighty years it has never discriminated against any race, sect, sex, or color. This is a factor of no slight moment in the Oberlin heritage.

The Oberlin colors, crimson and gold, "the gold of solid attainment and the crimson of sacrifice," were the colors of Oberlin's family coat of arms. The college motto, "Learning and Labor," was his life-long principle even up to fourscore years and six. He was a man of prodigious energy, industry and studiousness. It was appropriate that the college should early foster the antislavery movement, later originate the Anti-Saloon League, and always stanchly advocate every movement for social betterment, for a century and a half ago the man Oberlin was far in advance of his times in his ideas of philanthropy and social betterment and service. In every conceivable way he led his people upward to a more efficient social life. Truly he was a community builder of the finest type and well deserved the decoration of the Legion of Honor conferred upon him by his king. He anticipated our Oberlin emphasis on "the social consciousness" and the social teachings of Jesus. He shared our vision of Christian fraternalism. He shared our faith in the coming Kingdom of God, "the civilization of brotherly men."

Oberlin College has a right to be proud of its history and its record of service. We may well be proud also of our honored name. It is doubtful if any other American institution has a nobler heritage in the name it bears. Surely the spirit of John Frederick Oberlin still lives.

The New Campus

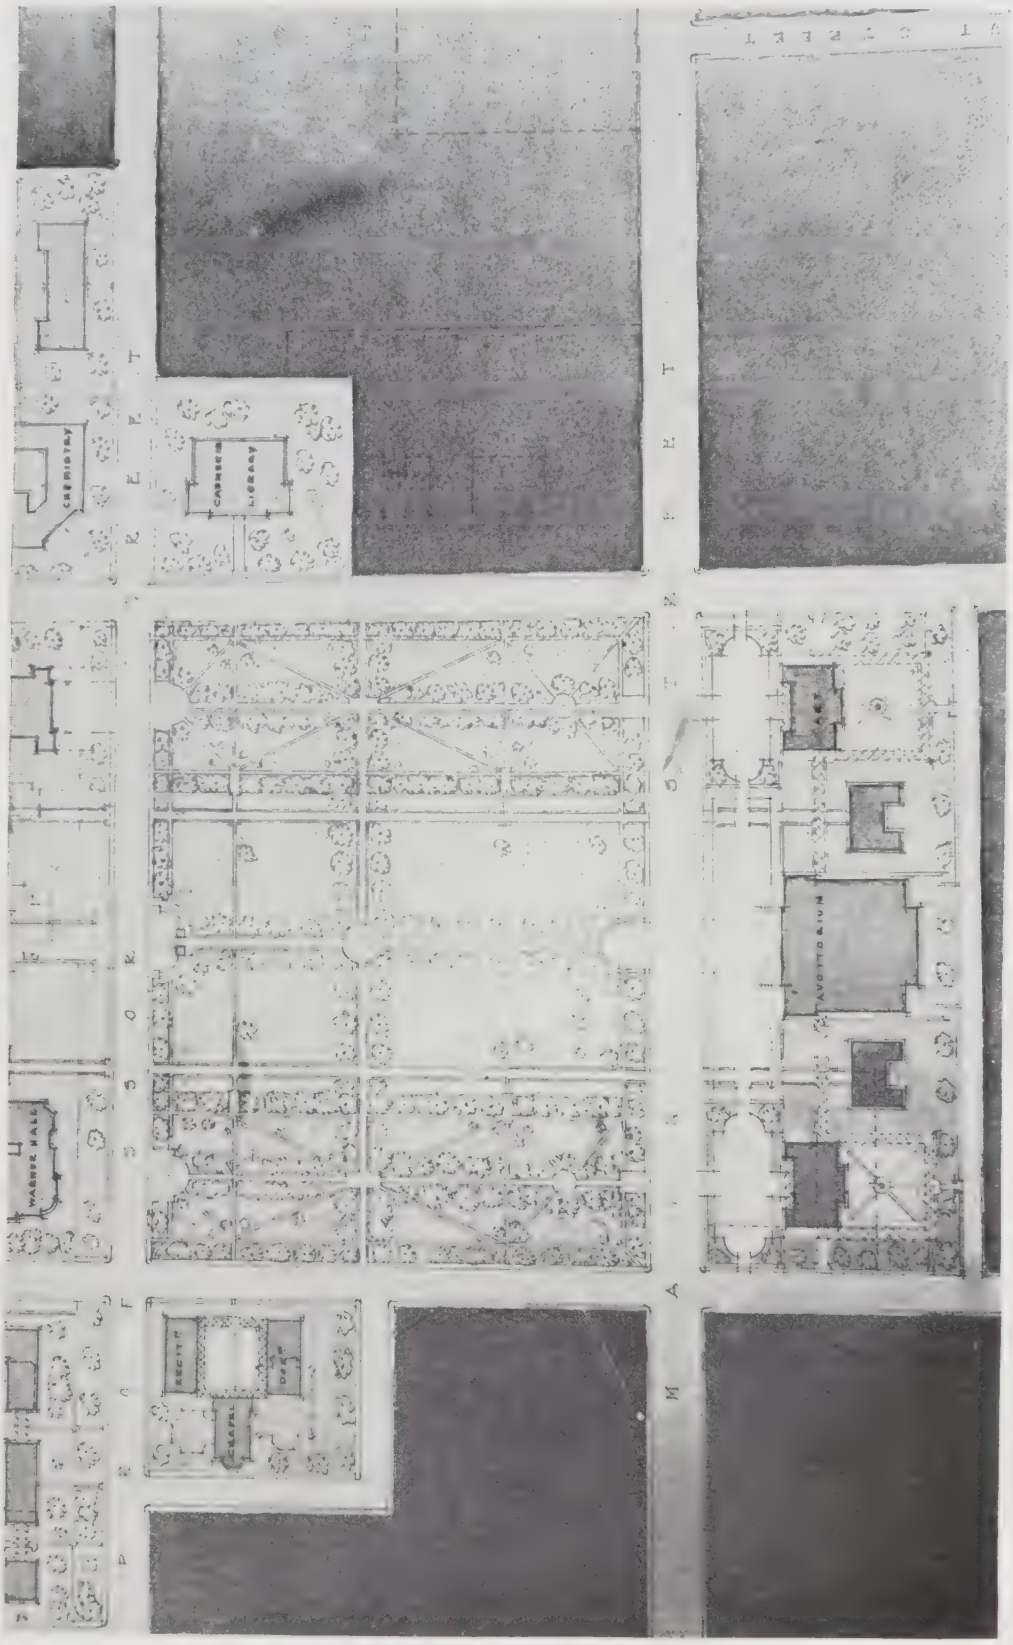

In considering the requirements of the future Oberlin, the Board of Trustees has decided to adopt a general scheme which shall provide for the location of all possible new buildings as part of a unified system. This plan is being prepared by Mr. Cass Gilbert, of New York City. At the present stage the plans are but tentative, although in general they follow the ideas of the Trustees. The accompanying sketch shows the large tower which it is proposed to construct as a center for the system. The general plans are presented on the two following pages.

Art Building

The Art Building, which has been made possible in great part by donors who prefer that their names should remain unknown, will occupy the site of Stewart Hall and the two structures to the south of it. Mr. Cass Gilbert is the architect and the architecture will harmonize with that of Finney Chapel and the Administration Building. The cost of the building will be one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. The extreme dimensions are about one hundred and thirty by one hundred and fifty feet. The height will be one story, except in the main exhibition hall, which will be two stories. The lighting will be modern and approved.

In an art museum for Oberlin it is necessary to make provision for three uses: Exhibition Rooms, Studios, and the History of Art. The exhibition rooms will consist of the main exhibition hall, designed more especially for large plaster casts of architecture and sculpture, a smaller room adjoining it, an exhibition corridor, and a gallery somewhat smaller than the main exhibition hall. The studio work will be carried on in three studios, exceptionally well arranged and lighted, a locker room, and an office. The history of art will have two lecture rooms, a room for the display of material for classes in the subject, and a library and reference room. The latter will contain books dealing with art, photographs and various reproductions which have heretofore been largely inaccessible.

The Art Building will in many ways tend to enrich the life and enlarge the opportunities of students and townspeople. No town of the size of Oberlin and probably no college in the country has as beautiful and serviceable a building for art purposes. Although it is said that three-fourths of the colleges in the United States continue to ignore art, the æsthetic, especially in institutions of the higher class, is winning a definite and important place in the curriculum. The building will furnish adequate accommodations for the Olney Collection, and for other material which has been stored or difficult of access, notably for the objects of Chinese and Japanese art, the gift of Mr. Freer of Detroit. The space in the Carnegie Library now occupied by the Olney Collection, which is sorely needed for stacks, can revert to its intended use. A small seminar room in the Library will also be available. Not only will there be adequate provision for what the College possesses and for temporary exhibitions from other sources; such a building, with suitable provision for safe and attractive display, will make an effective appeal for loans and for gifts. The Art Building is another step in the progress of Oberlin College.

Student Life in Shansi

One day of the college year is set apart as "Shansi Day," and it is on that day that our Oberlin in China becomes most real to us. We too often forget that all through the year live young men and women are taking advantage of the education we help to provide for them. Most of them are Christians, all of them are sincerely preparing themselves for lives of service. Yet they are fun-loving students like us and enjoy many of the same jolly good times that we do. They have stunt-nights, spreads, and rallies in the form of evening entertainments. These entertainments are often held in the chapel, a little room not much larger than our Peters Court and seating about two hundred people. The seats are long, low benches which can be moved about as occasion demands. The Chinese are clever imitators. They can "take off" their foreign acquaintances with a skill which betokens shrewd observation and keen wit. Their spreads usually take place after an evening of games or stunts. Peanuts and tea are always in evidence. Cakes, sweetmeats, fruits, and candies appear only on the more elaborate occasions.

ATHLETICS

Perhaps their rallies are the most surprising phase of their "college life," for they are what we would think of last in connection with our fellow students in Shansi. They enjoy athletics and are yearly entering more and more into this field of activity. Gymnastics, track athletics, and basketball, with this year the innovation of skating, have been most markedly successful thus far. Mr. Wolfe, in a letter, has told us a little about one of their track meets. The two city schools of Taiku and the Memorial Academy were entered. Mr. Wolfe writes: "The two city schools came out one hundred and twenty strong and joined heartily in most of the events. A number of the gentry came out and seemed greatly interested. The city schools first gave an exhibition drill, followed by a drill from the Academy. Then came the shorter dashes, a relay race, broad jump, pole vault, and other events. The academy boys outclassed all our guests for the reason that we are the only school that has done anything along this line." Because of their superior advantages in such work many of the grammar school boys go out at the request of the government to teach gymnasium in the other schools.

Another activity they have in common with us is the Glee Club. The Chinese are very musical and this is a great success and source of much pleasure. When we remember that they look upon our Oberlin as their Alma Mater, we realize why they sing our college songs with such pride and affection. In 1911, when Oberlin held the Ohio football championship, the Shansi students held a rally to celebrate our season's victories. Mr. K'ung wrote: "You should have heard them sing 'Man of Brawn' and give a rousing 'Hi-O-Hi' for coach Gray."

We naturally expect their Y. M. C. A. to be alive and active. Nor does it disap-point us. This year for the first time, its membership includes the whole academy. The students themselves conduct the work, aided, of course, by an advisory committee of the faculty. They have five standing committees and several deputation clubs. The latter do a great deal of extension work in the surrounding county, sending out preachers and evangelists and holding regular Sunday afternoon services in many villages.

Dr. H. C. Husted, of Oberlin, who is now in Taiku, Shansi, said in a letter: "One of the most impressing sights we see is the whole company of boys, both Academy and Grammar, marching down the railroad grading to church on Sabbath morning. Before starting they are called to the parade ground in front of our house and fall into line when the roll is called. Then they march to the church, at the South Compound, two miles away, in single file, the little fellows ahead. Almost all of them are dressed in the long garment, from light to dark blue, with here and there one of white. I will put up the bunch against any similar number and grade you can show at Oberlin. It would do your heart good to see them."

These are some of the things which we have learned about the students of our Shansi Memorial Academy, and which may bring us into closer sympathy with them and their work. Our best wishes go out to them always.

Once more the time has come for a college class to pack its lares and penates and journey into the far country. Once more convention dictates that a favored group shall spread its tale of glory for the admiring gaze of other less favored groups. But contrary to custom the class of 1914 does not wish to preen itself before the public eye. It is not like the usual run of senior classes. And this attitude of modest indifference to public applause it can confidently maintain because it knows itself worthy of that acclaim.

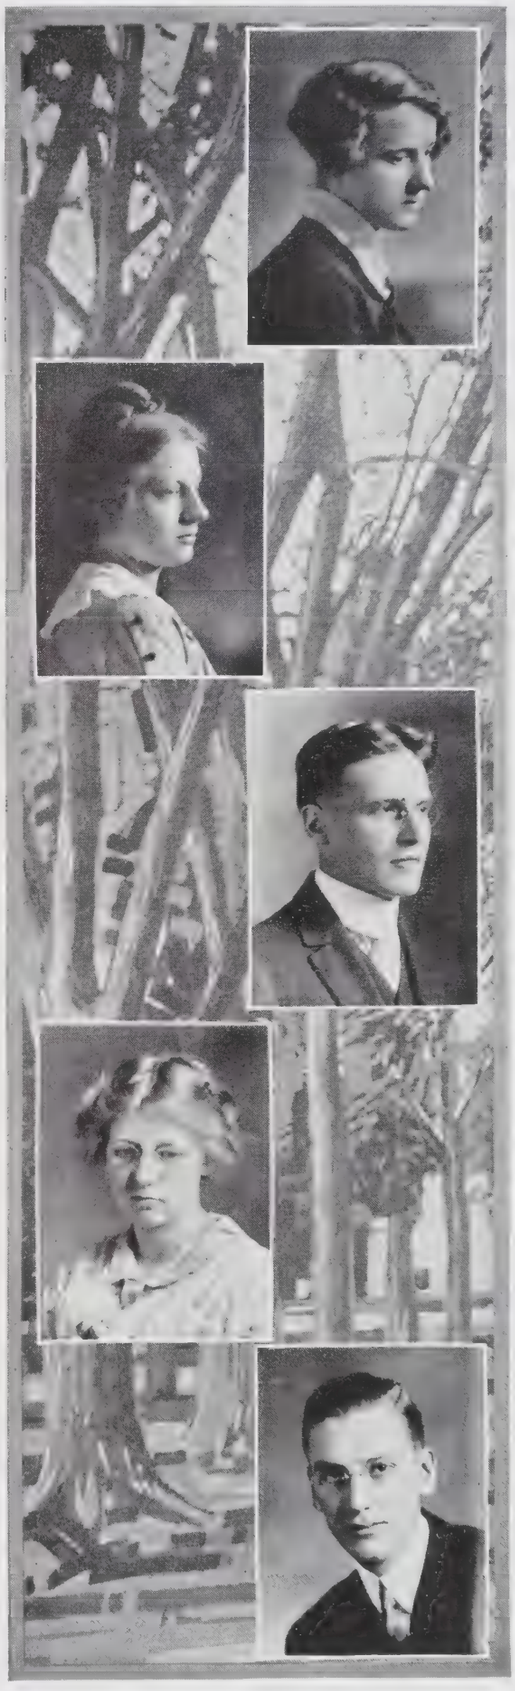

We know their names—the men who have fought and won for us in athletic and academic field alike. We shall not soon forget the women who have given their thought and energy to the making of better social conditions for those who come after. Nor would we boast of our limp-leather annual, albeit none like it ever appeared before; or of the dramatic association, whose first tottering steps we helped to guide; or even of the trail of the ditch-digger, which with our (unasked for) sacrifice, will make possible the garden of the New Oberlin.

But we are more interested in what we are going to do than in our accomplishments of the past, and even there more concerned that we mean well than that we present a polished surface to the world's view. We should like to be used in the foundations of things. We do not expect to revolutionize the world when we meet it, for we are not extraordinary persons. But because life to-day is what it is, and because Oberlin stands for the ideals it does, we expect to fill our places not unworthily.—E. C. H.

Class of 1915

Dear Dad o' Mine:—

Here it is another Sunday, so I sit myself down to write a loving little epistle to you. We've certainly been having great times lately—social affairs, exams, games—just everything. And that reminds me—will you let me have a check for four and a half dollars? You see, we've just bought our class pins, and besides that our class dues are bigger than usual. That sounds as if our class were extravagant, but just you let me explain. Why, they're only two and a half dollars. And listen to what we've done.

We're editing the HI-O-HI, an awfully big job, because it's going to be so very good this year, and we're staging an Elizabethean play. Just think, a real play with the real-sure-nuff Elizabethean scenery and stage. It certainly ought to be one good play, too—forty-four girls tried out for the four girls' parts, and I don't know how many men for theirs.

I'm writing this in the Lib. and I just had to go into the hall for a committee meeting, but I'm back now. It's a regular nuisance. We used to hold our committee meetings right in the main reading room and never be disturbed. Oh yes, what was I saying? The play, wasn't it? Well, with the proceeds of the play we are going to help publish the HI-O-HI, and when we get through with the scenery, we're going to rent it to future classes and use the money to help buy the chimes. We've got to dig up three hundred for that somewhere. Say, I guess those chimes are what you might call an ethical problem, ah me! I mean psychical one. When you get to be Juniors you can easily discriminate between the two. But say, our class surely solved the fussing question, and that's an ethical one all right, 'cause morality involves freedom of choice, and you should have seen the fellows choose that the Junior banquet be a non-fussing affair. It was dreadfully successful. The banquet table was decorated in red and white (our colors), but we served absolutely no dates. We were very democratic.

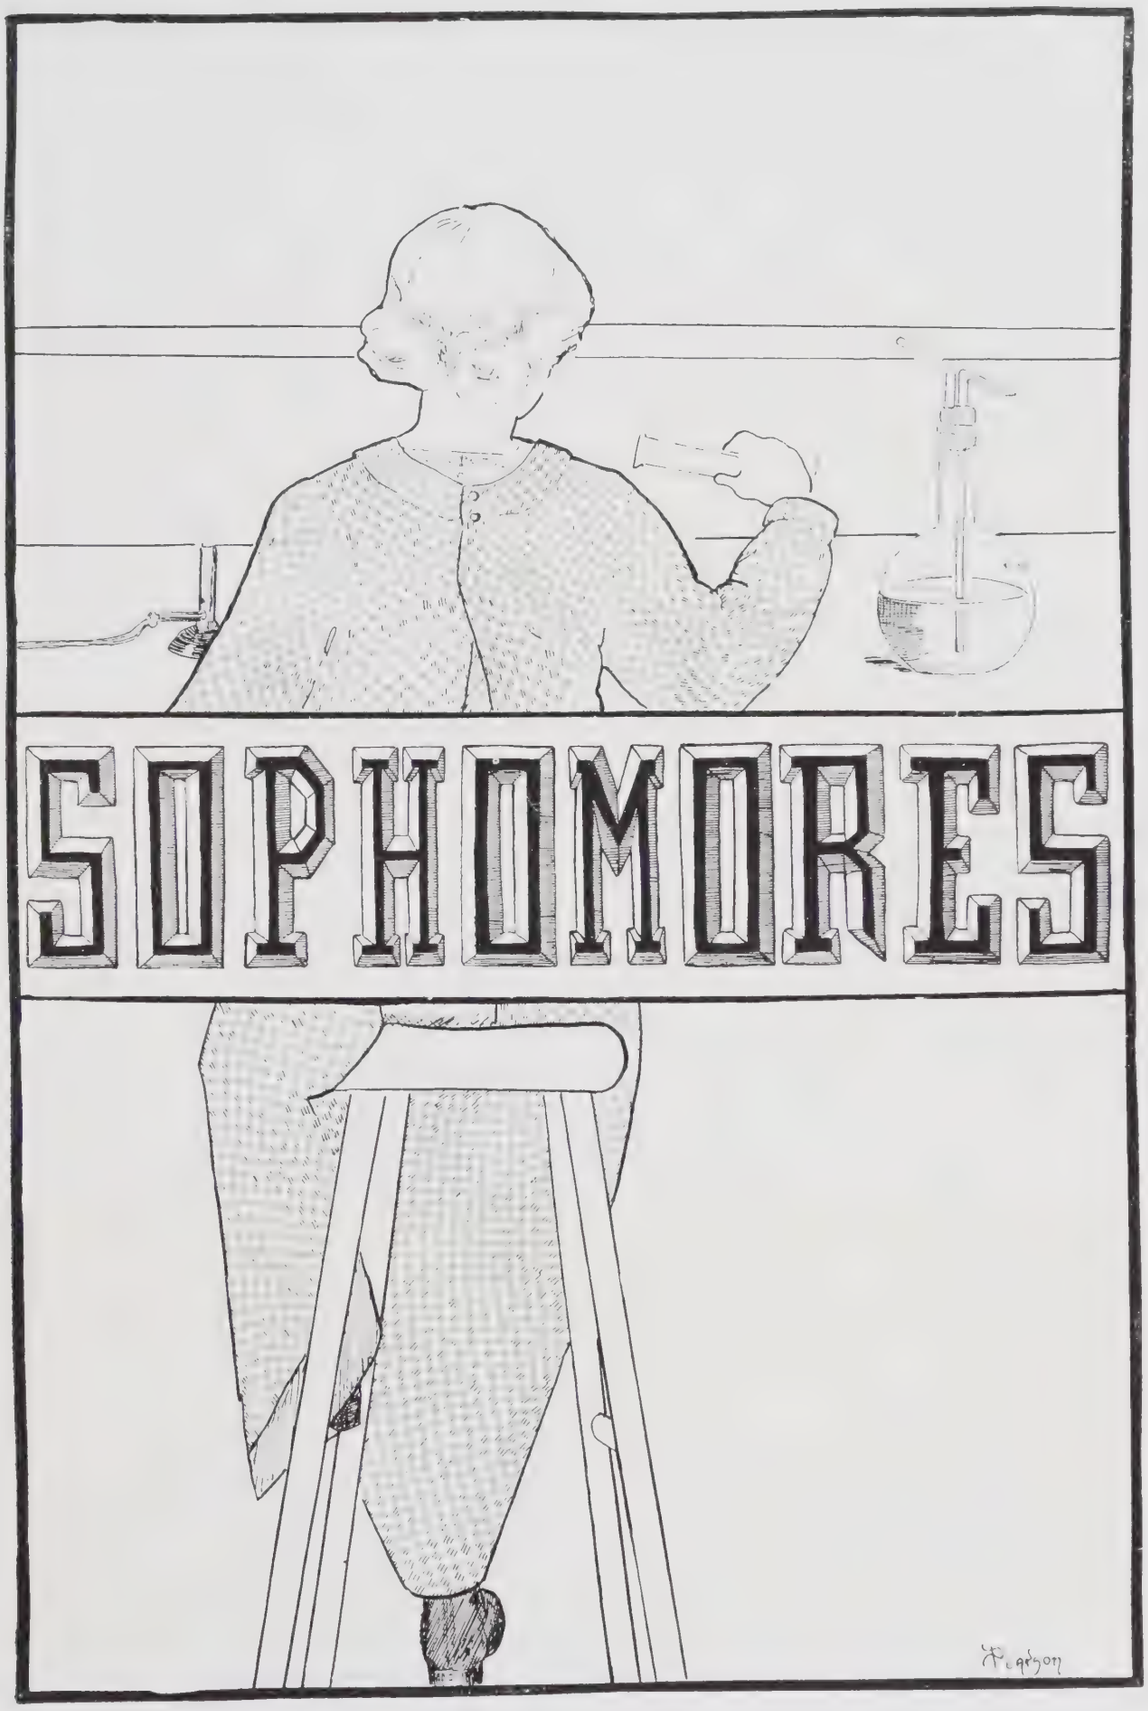

Democracy is our keynote. We had a class party and we all frolicked back to our kid days. Gee! we had fun. Well, anyway dad, you can see where our money has gone, can't you. Oh! I forgot, we spent some on athletics—that is, fellows' athletics. Tho' the fellows haven't been leading the season, the Junior girls are just breaking the record in basketball. So far, we've won every game. You ought to be here and I could just talk for hours, but I've simply got to stop now. I've three chapters to read in psychology and about four chap's in a lit. course.

You won't forget that check, will you?

Me.

The Sophomore's Tale

(The wryter is somewhat indebted to one Geoffrey Chaucer.)

Whan Hyghe Schoole with its last examme is o'er,
And after man hath closed its friendly door,
Thanne longen folk to gon on pilgrimages,
And students for to seeken strange strondes,
And specially from every schires ende
Of America to Oberlin they wende,
That learning and that labor for to fynde,
That them shall holpen thru this darke world's grynde.
Whan I had wended on my pilgrimage
To Oberlin with full devout courage,

One day was come to that communitie
Well nigh three hundred in a companye,
Of sondry folk, by adventure ifalle
In felaschipe, and pilgrims were we alle,
Who would in books for four yeres studye welle,
That in the ende the Registrar might telle,
How many thanne had come out to be wyse.
This was our waye thence as I you devyse;
The first yere in that lande had much of woe,
And many from our numbers back did goe;
The older folk who'd been there long before,
Did cryticise what on our heads we wore.
We needs must in a dreadfulle tourney tilt,
Against our betters (whom we well-nigh killt).
All thru that tyme our sorrows o'er us swept—
We weren "freshies," "children," "greens" y-clept,
But from the gloome our triumph did appeare,
So that at last whan finished was the yere,
Our place was made among the men of yore—
We bore the honored name of Sophomore.
And in the autumn whan the leaves did falle,
Our goode knights rallied to the game footballe.
In this and basketballe they fought full welle.
In track did they the freshmen far excelle.
Our delegates are seene in every field,
Where one for classe and schoole a lance can wield.
And we move in societie with ease—
Our knights of far renown and faire ladies,
With many a partye do we lighten lyf,
And so forget our labor and our stryf.
We are in soothe a merrye companye.
We'll have a jolly tyme whyl here we be.
We're glad there are a goode two yeres ahead,
Before we needs must earne our daily bread.
We'll labor long and strive to constant holde
Our loyaltie to dere true Blue and Golde.
Now whan we've brot you greetings everyone,
This tale will, like our worthie chief, be Dunn.

The Chronicle of 1917

Lo, these are they who have entered into the tribulations of their freshmen year —whose young men wear the freshman cap, and whose young women are cast forth in haughtiness at 7:30 from the library—yet whose wisdom shall be proclaimed to the ends of the earth.

In the beginning, all the children of the tribe of 1917 gathered together in secret, and Davey spake. And when the words were heard which Davey had spoken, Perry was chosen president. And Perry numbered the people that were with him about three hundred souls—both youths and maidens. And it came to pass that those of the tribe of 1916 came down upon them in a mighty host that was eager to overthrow and bind them, and to carry them from the land—which is (being interpreted), to knock down, tie up, and carry off. And the freshman smote the sophomores and all that were with them with strength and with paddles and with all manner of weapons till they were sore afraid and fled from before their face, and great was the slaughter thereof.

Now others of the tribe of Oberlin, waxing wroth, began to array themselves in arms against them that were of the freshman class, that they might show themselves valiant in football. And the children of the tribe of 1917, casting lots, man against man, chose a great and mighty team. And Nelly said: "It is good." And it came to pass, after certain days, that the tribes met to prove their valor, and the greatest was the tribe of 1917. Then, because of the many victories they had won, the children of the tribe gathered themselves together and purchased for their mighty warriors goodly sweaters.

And behold! the tribe did wax great in learning, so that some who were weak among them rejoiced not as the strong man to run his course, but sank wearied in the shadow of the sub-freshman composition. But none hath recorded the weeping and tribulations of these who fell by the way. And the young men did vaunt themselves in stags, and the maidens rejoiced with song and dance. And they appointed a day of thanksgiving and a feast of the inter-semesters. Then the seniors and the chief rulers of the land looked on them and found no fault in the tribe of the freshman.

Oberlin Theological Seminary

All the world meets in Oberlin, and the most cosmopolitan part of Oberlin is the Theological Seminary. From the east and from the west, from the north and from the south, from the islands of the sea these men come representing the nations of the world and going out again to the nations of the world to carry the message of service and good-will to all men, to impart the Oberlin spirit to the far corners of the earth. They represent a score or more of colleges. They come from many denominations. And yet there is unity untouched by doctrinal discussion which in the past would have made such close fellowship impossible. A man is not concerned with whether his neighbor is a Congregationalist, a Baptist, a Mennonite, or what not. A great common purpose binds them all together—the purpose of bringing nearer to a reality the kingdom of God in the hearts of all men.

Oberlin Theological Seminary is now a strictly graduate school. One has to have his college degree before he can enter. Its standards are above the standards of almost every other school of its kind. And the result is a higher grade of men, a better grade of study, a more adequately trained ministry for the future. Oberlin Seminary men may be counted on to be found in the front rank of every great forward-pushing enterprise. It has been and will continue to be so over and over again. Test it and see.—R. G. A.

When a conglomerate mass of humanity from all ends of the earth gets together in one building, some form of organization must be formed to regulate the procedure of that mass. Hence the Seminary Union. It exists for religious, social and other purposes. The other purposes consist of various unpleasant duties which no one wishes to perform and so are shoved off on the president of the Union. Religiously, the Seminary Union conducts its weekly prayer-meeting, a helpful half-hour coming at the close of a day. Socially, the Union has earned for itself a reputable name because of its first-class picnics, its excellent banquets, and its stags.

This year the Union has branched out and undertaken to unite into closer fellowship the Seminary body. For this purpose, one man offered himself in the fount. The vociferations on that night of his sacrifice disturbed the peaceful inmates of Keep and caused many untheological comments to be made. Class rivalry has fostered a feeling of fellowship which has brought about many such friendly combats. The Union indirectly has encouraged such fellowship, halos having been carefully hung up out of harm's reach. In many ways the methods of the Union have shown themselves to be as varied as its aims.—R. G. A.

The conservatory boards sprang into existence through the apparent necessity of an advisory medium between the faculty and students, and have become an important factor in the movement towards the newer idea of a system of self-government. These bodies have been instrumental in the establishment and maintenance of the honor system in the conservatory, and take charge of the general social functions of the student body connected with this department.

Perhaps the difficulties encountered in carrying out the aims of the board are not generally recognized; but when attention is called to the fact that the music student must to a certain extent be responsible for his own attainments and that his progress depends largely on his capacity for self-criticism, it is evident that his interest in student organizations will need some effective stimulation. With this fact in mind, the men's board has recently been established upon a constitutional basis, that it may have greater legislative strength in performing its representative duties. Many enjoyable social occasions of the boards result in closer personal relationships, which in turn tend towards a greater interest in the common cause.—D. D. P.

Believing that there was a need of greater co-operation between the Conservatory faculty and students, the Conservatory Women's Board was organized, in 1901, under the leadership of some of the prominent young women of that year. Its founding has marked a great change in the general spirit of the Conservatory—representing, as it does, all matters of student interest to the faculty, and conferring with the dean upon all student problems. In matters of import to both college and conservatory women, the board meets with the college senate in general sessions. The board also promulgates the larger social events of the year. In conjunction with the men's board it has the responsibility of electing members of the honor court. The board earnestly seeks the co-operation and loyal support of all conservatory students in carrying out its purpose.—J. E. B.

Phi Beta Kappa

The members of the organization known as Phi Beta Kappa are a humble folk, and with reason: they are constantly being reminded that they really have no place in a democratic scheme of things, much less in an epoch when people seek academic seclusion chiefly to perfect their legs or their souls or their affections and to prepare themselves to vote. Moreover, they know that if their individual claims to membership in this discredited organization were to be passed upon by the college at large, they would probably be found wanting. To hold a position that no one covets and to be regarded as unworthy of that, this is our hard lot. If you ask why we persist in seeking it, the answer is simple: it is more agreeable (in the language of the great patriot) to hang together than to hang separately. We huddle together for warmth in a cold world. We assemble to keep one another in countenance. Athletes eat in unison—I am, of course, thinking of Wordsworth's famous line: "They are forty feeding like one"—and the world pays cash to witness the inspiring scene. At certain seasons of the year, our friends with one accord take flight together, like migrating birds, to some not too distant clime, and there, amid the vast solitudes of nature, they—to employ the language of another great poet—"cheep and twitter twenty million loves"; while we go our unspectacular and inoffensive way, foregather once a year to crack our classic jokes and pour our watery libations, and we are scorned as supercilious and undemocratic, or as pretenders to a distinction which, if the truth were known, we should be found not to deserve. It is curious, but it is the way of the world. "As well be out of the world as out of fashion," says the proverb, and we, there is no denying it, are out of fashion.

However, we console ourselves with our motto: "Philosophy, the Guide of Life," being quite in accord with the Second Brother in Comus—you see, we are nothing if not pedantic and allusive.

"How charming is divine Philosophy!
Not harsh and crabbed as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectared sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns."

—C. H. A. Wager.

A faculty member who was endeavoring to explain to a visitor the function of the various organizations about the college, is reported to have remarked "that the men's senate was a student organization the purpose of which was to hold meetings and to—well, to hold meetings and occasionally pass recommendations." Doubtless there are among the faculty and student body many who still cling to this notion of the function of this organization. For the enlightenment of such individuals, it might be well to call attention to the fact that the men's senate has in reality accomplished some definite results during the few years of its history. A number of the important features of present-day college life in Oberlin, such as the honor system, the auditing system, general election day and pay-day, are altogether the result of the work of this body. Besides these outstanding achievements, the senate has been responsible for the establishment and regulation of many of the customs of the college—the sings and class tie-up, for example. More recently the senate has attempted to bring about a closer bond between upper and lower classmen through the establishment of the senior counsellor system. The football banquet, given for the first time this year, had its origin with the senate and will, it is hoped, become another of Oberlin's traditions which, bringing together the men of the faculty and student body, will make its full contribution to the life of the college. The senate has served in a number of instances as an effective means of communication between the faculty and student body, making possible a more sympathetic understanding of questions of mutual interest.

According to the constitution, "the object of the Men's Senate is to consider questions of general interest to all men of the institution, to encourage wise and needful legislation, and to strive in all honorable and proper ways to advance the interests promotive of the life and well-being of Oberlin College." The senate is a student organization created by the students, and demanding therefore their hearty support and co-operation. During the present year the faculty has shown itself ready to go even more than half way in co-operating with the senate. The student body, too, has shown its confidence in and readiness to support the enterprises of the senate. Having this co-operation, we may be sure that the senate will conscientiously strive to secure and maintain the highest and best interests of Oberlin College.—C. G. N.

"There will be a regular meeting of the Women's Senate Monday at 8:30 in the faculty room of the Library." Every other Monday evening this gentle reminder has brought together the twenty-two girls on whom the honor and responsibility of senate membership falls, to face together the various problems of our student situation. Here matters great and small are discussed and solutions worked out—not with infallible judgment, by any means, but with sincere, thoughtful consideration.

This year, in addition to the usual activities—honor court, senior examinations, various permissions, and other routine questions—the senate has been wrestling with the all-absorbing problem of rules. This question was left as a legacy from last year's senate, and it has been, at times, doubtful whether it was to be considered a white elephant or a guiding star. The senate has tried throughout to keep in touch and in sympathy with student sentiment through its mass-meetings and various inquiries, and at the same time to work in perfect co-operation and loyalty with the committee of the Women's Board. As the Hi-O-Hi goes to press, the long-expected revision of the women's rules on the basis of a graduated system has just been achieved, and it remains for the women of Oberlin College to show themselves worthy of their new privileges. Surely, this year's senate has not worked in vain!

This senate is, after all, a very young affair. It is easy to describe in misty terms its function of mediator between faculty and students, but harder to determine practically of just what use it is. But gradually it is gaining an established place, and is coming to be the body through which the faculty are willing to allow the student body greater self-direction and self-expression.—H. M. S.

With this year has come the inauguration of the plan by which senior men act as counsellors for freshman men. Acting upon the suggestion made by President King, the men's senate appointed a committee to investigate the advisability of such a system in Oberlin. After considering counsellor systems in various schools of the country, the committee drew up plans which were approved by the faculty and are in use at the present time.

The purpose of the system is to provide some definite means by which men who come to Oberlin for the first time may become acquainted with "some of those necessary and beneficial bits of information about the school, its customs and standards, which are now left to chance." During the summer the seniors write to the prospective freshmen and give them a more personal welcome than was formerly accorded them. After the opening of school the counsellors help them get started in their new life and then they (the counsellors) are left to act at their own discretion as to how much they do for their freshmen. According to this scheme the senior judges whether his men are succeeding or not. It is up to him to see that they do succeed. In this way, the position of the senior counsellor is one of responsibility, for it is his place to see that the new man has a fair chance at the college and that the college has a fair chance at him.

The Evolution of a Counsellor's View Point

(As told by her diary)

May 24—Today I was chosen a senior counsellor. What responsibilities there are connected with such a position; but what a great opportunity also! As a freshman, I should have appreciated such an adviser wonderfully; but in those days, experience was our adviser. I shall endeavor to get very near to the hearts of my girls and to instill into them the Oberlin spirit and ideals.

Aug. 16—Today I received the names of my freshmen and I'm going to write helpful, welcoming letters to them all, this very evening. It will make them feel that there is someone in college who is interested in them, and at the same time I can judge of their individual needs by the answers which they send back. I'm rather afraid, however, that Gwendolyn is going to be rather flighty, and tempted to break rules at times. Some sort of instinctive feeling tells me this.

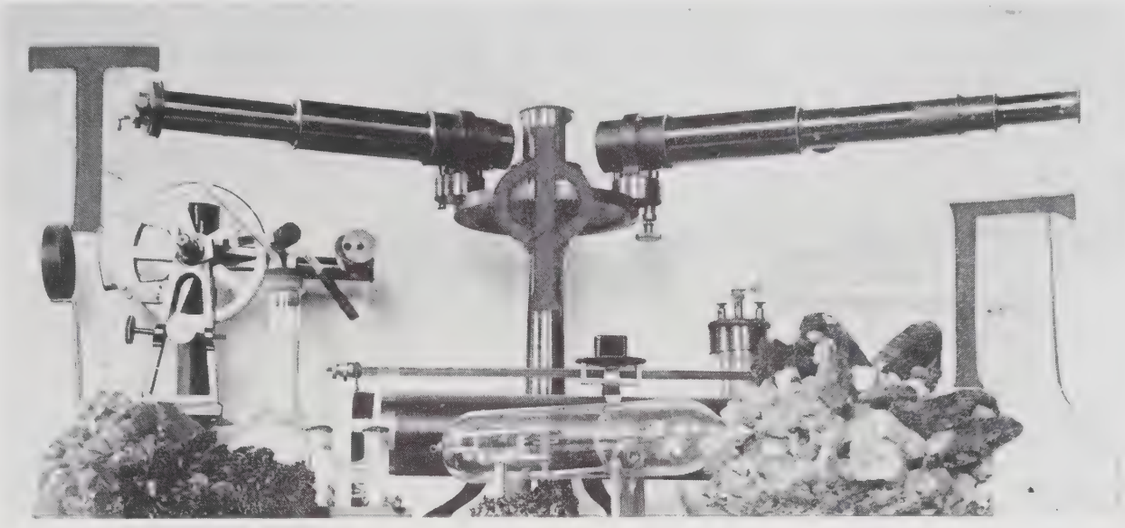

Sept. 2—Gwendolyn's reply has just reached me. She says that she will meet me at her boarding house any time Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning. Without doubt, she is coming with a man, because I offered to meet her at the train, but she says she will meet me at her boarding house. I must speak to Miss Fitch about Gwendolyn as soon as I get back.

Sept. 22—Oh! what fun to be back and to be a real, full-fledged senior! I brought my cap and gown in my suitcase for fear my trunk would be lost. I did an awful thing, though, I came back early because I thought it was my duty to be here when my freshman girls came in, but I was visiting with a crowd of seniors and forgot to meet the 11:56 on which two of them were coming. I suppose I should go to their boarding houses and call on them this evening, but I'll see them tomorrow and help them register.

Jan. 14—Senior counsellors had their picture taken today. For some reason or other, my conscience seemed to prick me, but I'm sure I don't know why it should. It is true that I haven't done anything for my girls since I helped them register. But then, I did that all for the best, because I think that self-reliance and independence can be learned nowhere so well as in college, and especially in one's freshman year. I myself know whereof I speak. I met Gwendolyn today just as her father was bringing her back in the machine after a Sunday's visit at home. She told me that she had joined the Student Volunteer Band. I cannot help but feel that such a decision, so early in her college course is due, to some extent at least, to the self-reliance and independent thinking which I have sought to develop in her.—L. D. To the Editor:—

You have asked me to give you a reason for the formation of a scientific society in Oberlin College. Now while I will agree with you that it is strange that a scientific society should be formed in the same year as the Dramatic Association, the Press Club, and half a dozen other organizations, the remarkable thing, to me, is that it has not been done before. Once, indeed, there was a time when science was not counted among the liberal studies, but today, to ask for a justification of a society whose ambition is to increase the common knowledge of the physical sciences, to supplement the curriculum work by excursions, and to afford a forum for the discussion of the scientific questions of the day, is to seem palaeocrystic. While at the time when Huxley championed the cause of scientific education a justification of Tau Phi Gamma might have been rightly asked for, today, when every school has its honorary scientific societies and fraternities, there is an obvious need for this society in Oberlin. For men always like to talk about the things in which they are interested, and as it is peculiarly necessary in talking about scientific subjects to have intelligent hearers, this society was formed to afford the scientific students of Oberlin College a bond for their acquaintance and fellowship.

The great practical justification, however, for the formation of Tau Phi Gamma is its roll of thirty charter members, its discussions of such subjects as the Nebular and Planetissimal Hypotheses, and the papers read before it on such subjects as: Wireless Telegraphy (with a demonstration of a working set), Road Making, The Fixation of Nitrogen, Color Photography, and Radioactivity.—H. The Oberlin Y. M. C. A. was organized in 1881. Its object has been to develop in the men a religious life which should express itself in practical service. The success of the association in doing this is shown by the interest now taken in its activities. Today, four-fifths of the men in college are active members. Twenty of these willingly take time from athletic or literary work to fill positions of chief responsibility. Over two hundred serve in the several campaigns of the year. Faculty, students, and townspeople contribute to support the Y. M. C. A., recognizing it as a powerful factor in Oberlin life.

During the past year, under the leadership of the president and general secretary, the association has been unusually active. An energetic finance campaign, socials in the Men's Building, the establishment of a new basis of membership, and a new departure in Bible study have been special features. Members are no longer required to belong to some church; they must simply have an active interest in Christian work. Bible study classes, under the present arrangement, are led entirely by professors and graduate students. A three days' conference of cabinet men was held at the lake before the opening of school in the fall. This conference and the weekly meetings of the cabinet thereafter have bound the various departments together and made possible unified action on all phases of the work. Progress has been made during the period just passed which may well be an inspiration for the future.—L. P. B.

YWCA

The past year in the Young Women's Christian Association has been marked as a campaign year. It began last spring with a determined effort to make mission study vital. The carefully planned campaign for summer conference followed. All through the spring term the organization of Bible study went actively forward, including the training of Bible study leaders in normal groups under Dr. Bosworth. The fall term registered the finance campaign, the Bible study, and membership rallies. The year has been markedly successful in all these efforts. Mission study classes never showed so large an enrollment. The largest delegation in years went to Eagles Mere and Lake Geneva. The success of the finance campaign has become famous; the results in Bible study and membership have been highly satisfactory.

There was, however, back of all these campaigns a bigger, deeper campaign being carried on by the leaders of the Association. The cry has been, "Make the purpose real. Deepen the significance of membership." Organization we had—perhaps too much of it. The effort this year has been to broaden out, to keep the very efficient organization, but to add to it and to keep above it the purpose of the Y. W. C. A., "to unite girls in loyalty to Christ, and to associate them with the students of the world for the advancement of His kingdom." In order to separate membership from the dollar, no one was asked to become a member of the Y. W. C. A. until after the finance campaign, which gave every person in college an opportunity to express his interest in the Association by pledging to its support. As soon as the question of support was settled it was possible to extend the invitation for membership easily and naturally.

That the association of members might be a normal one, the practical and social aspect of it received careful consideration. The aim has been to give as many members as possible a share in the actual work, through a definite connection with some one of the departments of the Association. The "get acquainted" picnic, the informal teas, and the social five minutes during the Sunday meeting have had no small part to play in the big plan. While the actual number of members enrolled is not quite so great as it has been in former years, the increase in the attendance at the weekly meetings shows that there is a much larger percentage of real members than there has ever been before. —C. While the Student Volunteer Band does not feel that it has perfectly attained its purposes and ideals, still it believes that there is much reason for encouragement. The Kansas City Convention, stirring as it did the entire college, brought an added number of those who are to take their places on the "firing line," and gave new life to the band. The number of missionaries, returned or on furlough, in Oberlin has been a great source of help and inspiration to the band as a whole and to the members individually. The cordial welcome with which the deputation groups have been received in the Sunday schools and churches in various sections of the county is a cause for satisfaction. In this way the work has been presented from the viewpoint of its educational, medical, spiritual, and industrial phases. The results have been on the whole satisfactory. Of the seventy members now in the band, a large number expect to go out to the field this year. —E. A. R.

Prof. William J. Hutchins	Director

Although one of Oberlin's younger organizations, Theta Club is much older than the mass of students realize. It is not one of the numerous bodies which have sprung into existence during the years of the present student generation. Theta's birth was prophetic of her whole life. Without noise and without great show, the club first met as a "round table" discussion at the home of Professor Hutchins, who has been the life and strength of Theta ever since.

The club is a typical Oberlin student religious circle—it is small, it is unostentatious, it is vital. Membership is purely voluntary. Theta welcomes men of all classes and of all departments; the requirement for admission is merely interest in things religious. Theta is not a ministerial incubator, nor does it serve for a recruiting station for all lines of social or religious service. In fact, it is in no way connected with the Theological Seminary. Not all men who enter the divinity school or choose other types of religious or religio-social work have been Theta men during their college years; nor do all Theta men dedicate themselves to such activities. The gathering finds its raison d'etre in a recognition of such issues in modern fields as mark the advance or retreat of the higher conceptions of Christianity; and a significant benefit to the Theta man is the informal mingling of students and faculty members for the consideration of problems in which all are keenly interested. Theta is, briefly, the busy college man's religious discussion club.—P. V. K.

Union Literary Association

The Union Literary Association is the organization in which the literary interests of the college life are centered. Its membership is made up of all the members of the eight literary societies. To Oberlin students who haunted Spear in the days of the U. L. A. Library, the association, as it now exists, may seem a mere shade of the former dignified book-holding body. Yet, in its transformed state, it is living an active life and, we hope, performing some useful service. At present the oratory and debate interests of the school, the Review, the Monthly, and the college lecture course comprise its list of direct activities—a situation which brings about logical inter-relations of all literary work. In addition, the association promotes a feeling of mutual concern and friendly co-operation among the literary societies by giving them common interest and responsibility.

In the societies themselves the present year has seen some attempt to get away from the stereotyped meeting of old, and to introduce more vital material. Apparently this is a transition period in the matter of literary society programs. Intersociety debates have strengthened relations among the women, and an intersociety banquet among the men. Tau Kappa Epsilon, the new women's society, has become a party to the association compact.

With the exception of oratory, in which interest has been weak, the direct activities of the U. L. A. have had a successful year. Varsity debating was of a high order. The two publications have never been more representative of the student body and have never made a larger contribution to the highest standards of student life. The lecture course, combining worth and variety, has been one of the most satisfactory of recent years. The speakers were: Mr. C. Edmund Neil, Mr. Alfred Noyes, Mr. Bliss Perry, Mr. John T. McCutcheon and Mr. Garrett P. Serviss. The board of directors has given chief attention to the proposal of more definite by-laws and needed changes in machinery, and to the publication of a constitution, by-laws, and rules in pamphlet form.

How great has been the progress of the Review can be seen by comparing the journal of today with the publication of six or eight years ago. With the broadening of student interests, and the widening of the range of the news columns, the semi-weekly has been such a success that the Review is now a paying proposition.

This year has seen in the Review the maintenance of aims of former days with the addition of a few metropolitan features, such as telegraphic bulletins of out-of-town events, and cartoons by our staff artist. The policy of publishing all the college news of whatever nature has been definitely entered upon, and as a rule, the quantity of news has exceeded the space available. In spite of considerable criticism raised at the start, we believe the policy to be warranted by the results.

The Press Club, recently organized under the leadership of the Review, will organize undergraduate interest in newspaper work, and cannot help working efficiently toward a better Oberlin press and the production of a real newspaper.—J. W. L.

Last year someone called the Monthly "a growing boy" in preference to the epithet that it had been wont to hear—"the infant." What shall we say this year? "Bigger and better than ever before?" That sounds like a circus, doesn't it? We can only enter the plea that the two have points in common, for the editorial staff at least. From the temperamental contributor to the linotype man, the editor must do a great deal of skillful handling in order that she may have thirty-two pages of literature before the "clamoring public" on the appointed day. But it has been done. In five short years the Monthly has advanced from a sixteen page pamphlet, filled mostly with editorials and quotations from Elbert Hubbard, to a thirty-two page magazine with—well, the current number has in it two good short stories, a play in three acts, two poems, and two essays, besides two pages of snappy editorials. We can almost visualize the time when we shall have a magazine with a flat back and a world-wide reputation. Shall we not say "a comer?"—R. O. B.

Just before school closed last spring, a new organization was born. Its purposes, as set forth in the constitution, are "to promote and control an intelligent interest in the drama; to secure a high quality of work in student dramatics; to concentrate responsibility for the adequate production of student dramatics; and to acquire such scenery, properties, costumes, electrical apparatus, and property of a like nature as may be necessary." At present the purposes are being carried out only as plans, which include a play to be given by the association next fall. The Irish Players and the Coburn Players have been engaged to come to us this spring under the auspices of the association Time will bring strength and greater production.—R. O. B.

Director	Philip D. Sherman
General Manager	Herbert C. Mayer
Property Man	Karl M. Cowdery

The Junior Play of this year marked a distinct departure in Oberlin Dramatics. Instead of a modern stage setting for an Elizabethan play, a replica of the interior of the original Fortune Theater was set into Warner Hall. The "shadow" and the "heavens," the boxes and the balconies, were faithfully reproduced. On and around the stage, an Elizabethan audience, with its frolicking and fighting, its hisses and applause, gave a good idea of the difficulties with which Shakespeare's plays had to contend. The acting was of a high order, and although the play was valuable from an educational standpoint, it proved amusing as well. The highest credit is due to Professor Sherman for his ingenuity and labor in planning and directing the whole, and to Mr. Mayer for his efficient management and his untiring work in constructing the setting.

French Club

Professor R. P. Jameson	Director
Jay C. Weller	President
Helene V. Boucher	Vice-President
Edith M. Halliday	Secretary
Professor K. L. Cowdery	Treasurer

The work of the French Club this year has been planned with the following objects in view:

1. The acquirement by the students of the ability to speak conversational and idiomatic French fluently.

2. The gain of a broader knowledge of French manners and customs, and of French music and literature.

With this end in view, the meetings have been devoted to the singing of French popular songs by the members of the Club, occasional short programs consisting of readings or recitations and vocal solos, the conversational study of French anecdotes in groups under the guidance of the leaders, and the playing of French games. During the year scenes have been presented from the plays "Horace" and "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

KNAPP ANDEREGG

German Club

HAROLD D. SMITH	President
ELIZABETH E. KNAPP	Vice-President
MARY J. GLANN	Secretary
EDWIN EELLS, JR	Treasurer
DOROTHEA M. ANDEREGG	Social Chairman

The primary purpose of "Der Deutsche Verein" is to facilitate a live acquaintance with conversational German, and to encourage an intelligent interest in the customs and manners of Germany today. The club seeks to bridge the gap between the essential limitations of the classroom and the demands of actual practice. Gradual development has shown a marked advance toward the ideal furtherance of such an aim.

The progress of the club this year owes a great deal to last year's bequest of success. The performance of Benedix' "Die Hochzeitsreise" was indicative of many happy results secured by the efficient organization and enthusiastic interest which the "Verein" of 1912-13 possessed.

The feature of this year's work has been putting the management of the club into the hands of the students to a greater extent. The regular meetings have proved very worth while. Conversation groups, under the direction of their leaders, consume the larger part of the time; chorus singing or special music closes the hour. One meeting in the month is given over to a "Program-Abend." The attendance has been consistently large, and the new meeting place afforded by the kindness of the Kindergarten Training School has proven very satisfactory.

Each year new features are incorporated into the club, making it increasingly a strong and progressive organization. When the college throws open the doors of its ample "Modern Language Hall," the German Club means to be well qualified for a place of merited recognition.—H. D. S.

SKETCH CLUB

The Oberlin Art Association is an outgrowth of the widening interest in art in Oberlin. In its second year it has brought to Oberlin several good lecturers and exhibitions of art work. Chief among the lectures are those by Lorado Taft, Mr. James H. Breasted, and Prof. I. B. Stoughton Holborn, of Oxford University, England. The most interesting of the exhibits have been the oriental rugs, the Donahey cartoons, and the exhibition of the works of the women painters of America.

The most significant event in this year's history was the announcement of an anonymous gift to the College of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars for the erection of an art building. The plans are now under way in the hands of Mr. Cass Gilbert, of New York, the college architect. With the Olney Art Collection housed here, and with our exhibitions in such rooms as this building will make possible, we have every reason to hope that the association will steadily grow in size and favor.—R. O. B.

Press Club

The Oberlin Press Club is an undergraduate organization of men and women actively interested in various phases of newspaper work. The officers are: President, John W. Love; secretary, Rena Culbertson; treasurer, Edward M. Martin. There are three faculty advisers: Secretary Jones, Professor Stiven and Professor Sherman.

The active members of the club meet each Tuesday noon, when assignments are given out according to individual preference. Every field of general interest to the public is covered—athletics, the drama, music, social events, finance, new buildings, faculty legislation, etc. The copy prepared by the members catches the daily mail east and west, going to fifty-two representative journals in all parts of the country. Among the papers receiving Press Club news service are the following: The Boston Transcript, the New York Times, Sun, Globe, Tribune and Post; the Springfield Republican, the Toledo Blade, the St. Louis Times, the Indianapolis News, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Zanesville Courier, the Emporia Gazette, the Cincinnati Times-Star, the Youngstown Vindicator, the Akron Times, the Dayton Journal, the Cincinnati Post, the Sandusky Register.

The entire membership meets at intervals to hear addresses by leading newspaper men on various topics of a practical nature—what constitutes news, the writing of feature stories, handling telegraph items, editorial writing, administrative problems of the office, etc.

The object of the Press Club is two-fold. It aims to give opportunity for actual experience in managing copy to those who anticipate entering certain definite fields of journalism. It aims also at placing before the general public in timely fashion authoritative information regarding the manifold interests and activities of Oberlin College.

Scribblers' Club

The Scribblers have penned their way through the second year of their union in an uneventful manner. Three members left us with the departing class of nineteen-thirteen. "All passes, art alone endures." All but one of the present group are seniors. Who knows but that in another year all will have passed, and only their art, in the files of the Monthly and the hearts of their associates may be left to call to mind the hours spent together as Scribblers.—R. Equal Suffrage League

Rowena Woodham	President
Harold W. Niederhauser	Vice-President
Rowenna G. Jones	Secretary
Ruth A. Brown	Treasurer

It is always difficult to give the aim and scope of an organization which has formulated no more definite purpose than "the keeping the subject in the minds of the people." Yet this has been the avowed purpose of the Equal Suffrage League, and this it has endeavored to do through several years of more or less precarious existence. There has been no attempt of late to manage lectures; the desire has been rather to embrace into the League all who desire to join; to arouse enthusiasm through local speakers and open meetings; and ultimately to be able to disperse throughout the country those who may be better fitted to argue and work for the cause of suffrage.

At an open meeting of the League in the spring of last year the membership was doubled, and in the fall of this year at the organization pay-day an unexpected number expressed their support. Open meetings throughout the year and a membership campaign this spring have kept the subject alive. With the increased numbers and greater support, the League may begin to feel that the achievement of its conquest for equal suffrage, as far as Oberlin College goes, is in sight.

AT the opening of the school year in the fall of 1913, fifteen vacancies were to be filled. The proposition of securing so many men who could be trained by Christmas time to give the typical concerts for which the Club is noted, seemed a big problem for the examination committee. After two very trying sessions with each shaking, perspiring candidate, the full membership was secured and the new men were initiated into the Oberlin College Glee Club.

Three and four hours of steady practice weekly during the fall term under the direction of "Jack" Wirkler put the Club in the best of shape for the regular holiday trip. On December 23, in one of Oberlin's typical downpours, the Club started on its westward journey.

The trip was in every way a success, concerts being given in four of the middle western states—Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Iowa. Although the distance covered was not so great as that of some former years, yet the audiences everywhere were very large and enthusiastic, in many cases asking for return engagements on the Club's next western trip. Two events which will ever remain in the memories of the members of the Club might be mentioned here. These were the elegant supper and entertainment by the parents of Habegger and Sprunger, in Berne, Indiana, and the concert and dinner with the Alumni Association at the Hotel La Salle in Chicago.

During the Easter vacation the Club appeared in Pennsylvania, in Pittsburgh and

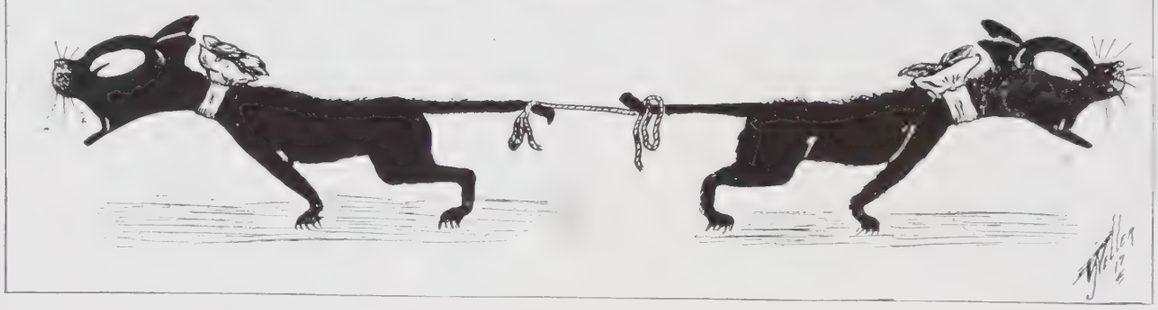

Erie, and in New York, in Jamestown, Clifton Springs and Buffalo. In each town it repeated the success characteristic of the western trip at Christmas time. Other successful concerts were given during the year in Cleveland, Ashtabula and Sandusky. The honors for the success of the Club are to be equally divided between the director, Mr. Wirkler, and the manager, Mr. Alderfer. To produce a club which sang as one voice with real musical feeling, to secure good audiences, and to look after the general welfare and the happiness of each individual are only a few of the many difficulties which these two men so successfully met.—B. In its work this year the Musical Union is carrying out a policy which gives its members a view into a wide range of musical masterpieces. The Chorus learns during the course of the year two compositions which come under the head "classical" and another which is strictly of the modern school. Handel's "Messiah" was given in the First Church on the night before the Christmas Holidays. The concerts of the May Festival include a nineteenth-century oratorio, Bruch's "Odysseus," and one of the twentieth century, Gabriel Pierne's "The Children's Crusade." In the presentation of the latter the Union is undertaking a novel proposition. The usual chorus is aided by a smaller chorus of twenty-five high-school singers who represent the Children of the Crusade. In doing this, Oberlin's Chorus is attempting what larger city choruses have carried out with great success, presenting a difficult modern composition with the parts and in the manner originally designed for it.

Coach Metcalf

Nelson Metcalf graduated from Oberlin in 1912. Although the was a member of the football team, it was in track that he made his greatest reputation. In the spring of his senior year he established the "Big Six" record for the mile, and the Western Conference record for the two-mile, both of which have yet to be broken. Last year he acted as assistant coach to "Crip" Gray, and this year, with the departure of Gray, he has held the chief position himself. By molding a bunch of green men into a team which tied with Ohio state for the championship of Ohio, Nelson Metcalf has inscribed his name under those of Snyder and Gray in the list of Oberlin's great coaches.

Coach Pyle

The athletic record of "Jud" Pyle has been one of those which stand out as beacon lights in the long line of Oberlin athletes. While in college he won nine "O's," four of which represented championship teams. As a football end, his peer has never been seen here; as a basketball guard he shares highest honors with a possible one or two; and as a baseball player, his prowess is best set forth by the fact that he was the youngest captain Oberlin ever had. This year he has been assistant coach of football and head coach of basketball and baseball. His basketball five defeated Ohio state twice and tied with that wonderful Denison team for the state championship.

Cheerleader Jelliff

The HI-O-HI would be incomplete did it not contain a page of tribute to the finest cheerleader in Oberlin's history, Russell Jelliff. Possessed first of all with a natural ability to lead yells and sings, Jelliff was able to focus the efforts of the rooters into one great voice and spirit with the result that our cheering reached its zenith this year. "Jelly" was always "right there" to conduct sings, send-offs, or rooting at games, whether at Oberlin, Cleveland, or Columbus, or whether at 6:30 A.M. or at 10 P.M. At games he threw himself into his work in an absolutely impersonal manner, seeking no praise for himself, but desiring only to make himself useful to the team, and, through the team, to the school. At the Denison basketball game, with the score going against us, he left his seat with his young lady companion, denying himself any personal enjoyment of the play, and led a little group of twenty men in cheering for the losing five, until at the final whistle he was well-nigh as exhausted as any one of the players. His fine spirit also furthered the cause of intercollegiate friendship by giving the yells of the other colleges, by meeting the opposing cheerleader in the center of the field, and by exchanging cheers with the other rooters. In short, he had those qualities of intelligent leadership and fine discernment which always enabled him to do the right thing at the right time. In our opinion, no one man in College has done so much for Oberlin's athletic sportsmanship—in its largest sense—as has our cheerleader this year. If it were possible to dedicate a section of a book to some person, the Athletic Department of the 1914 HI-O-HI would be dedicated to Russell Jelliff.

NEILL, CAPTAIN 1914

FISHER, CAPTAIN 1913

"Football Coaches Face Difficult Proposition." Such were the headlines of the first column of the first Oberlin Review last autumn. Professor Savage was particularly gloomy over the outlook. Writing for the same paper, he said that due to heavy losses from graduation, lack of Sophomore material, ineligibility of several of the old men, and the loss of Coach Glen C. Gray, "the football prospects for the coming season are not rosy."

Then started the fireworks which shot our team up from the position of "the best in the village of Oberlin" to that of "tied with Ohio State for the championship of Ohio. The first game was an easy victory over Heidelberg by a 45-0 score. The Cornell game was lost, 37-12, but it merely served as a stimulus toward securing Ohio honors. Miami's big huskies came up here with the confident expectation of "wiping Oberlin off the map" (quoting one of their own players), but both Captain Fisher and "Brock" Henderson dispelled all such illusions by scoring a touchdown apiece in the first minute of play. The big State game the following week was a defensive encounter, neither team being able to make many long gains. If "Dutch" Thellar, beyond the goal line, had only been able to stand on a dictionary to catch one of "Pete's" passes, however, the score would not have been 0-0. But the most thrilling contest, and the one in which our boys did themselves most proud, was the Case game at Cleveland, where Oberlin overcame a lead of 21-7 and won 26-24. "Brock's" 384 gained yards helped slightly. The Reserve and Wesleyan games, played in mud of the splashing variety, were won 13-6 and 25-0, thus closing the schedule without a single defeat.

That first headline, "Football Coaches Face Difficult Proposition," is, in the light of final results, the highest praise we can give Coaches Metcalf and Pyle. As to the team itself, it had the famous Oberlin spirit of which we sing:

"Bravely with thy foemen vie,
Dare to do, nay more, to die."

Throughout that long gruelling contest with State, and, especially, in that unforgettable Case game, the "Knights of the Golden 'O'" displayed their ability to live up to the standards of long ago. Of Frank Fisher, the leader of that eleven, little need be said. As to his playing ability, consult lists of "all-state teams," and members of opposing squads; as to his qualities of leadership, notice the respect, admiration, and affection which his teammates unfailingly give him; and finally, as to his position as a college man, note his versatile list of activities, his high marks in scholarship, and the esteem with which he is regarded by the student body, as instanced in their presentation of a golden watch fob to their captain.

The last factor in this success is college spirit. The rallies, send-offs, and games were attended by the largest and most unified crowds of the last ten years. Any football man will tell how the singing of the "New Alma Mater" began the upward climb of the Case game. And as the college men came together at the football banquet to pay tribute to their brothers of the team, the essential truth was clear: that, while college spirit and football aid each other mutually, the immeasurably greater service of football is that of giving to the student body unanimity in its admiration for noble sportsmanship and manliness.

The Players

FRANK C. FISHER, Captain 1913

AGE, 20 HEIGHT, 5:11 WEIGHT, 175 BIRTHPLACE, VOLGA, S. D.

"Pete" played two years on the Oberlin High School team, acting in the added capacity of captain in his last year. He made the Varsity in his sophomore year in college, was generally chosen for most of the All-Ohio elevens in each of his last two years, and was unanimously elected captain for his senior year. His position was left half-back.

THOMAS NEILL, Captain-elect for 1914

AGE, 22 HEIGHT, 5:6 WEIGHT, 145 BIRTHPLACE, VENICE, O.

"Tommy," the midget center, played two years for Oberlin Academy and one year on the 1915 freshman team. In his sophomore year he made the Varsity, and has played for two seasons now.

REES H. DAVIS

AGE, 21 HEIGHT, 6:0 WEIGHT, 182 BIRTHPLACE, MALAD, IDA.

"Rees" is a big man who gained his experience in the academy department of the College of Idaho, where he played two years. After playing for two years on his class team, he made the Varsity squad as a Junior, but did not play in enough games to win his "O" until this last fall.

CLYDE R. DURBIN

AGE, 20 HEIGHT, 6:0½ WGHT., 175 BIRTHPLACE, FREDERICKTOWN, O.

Known merely as Clyde. He was on the Fredericktown High School eleven for two years, but was never recognized as a player of worth until an injury to George Hubbard in 1912 opened up a vacancy at right guard which allowed "Durb" to make the regular lineup. He had come out for every single practice in his sophomore year—a training of the stiffest kind. His final reward was being chosen for the All-Ohio.

HAROLD L. HENDERSON

AGE, 22 HEIGHT, 5:6 WEIGHT, 136 BIRTHPLACE, OBERLIN, O.

Everybody knows all about "Brock," the "little general" of many a gridiron battle. One season as quarterback on the Oberlin High School team and another on a championship freshman bunch, constituted his experience. As a sophomore he changed off with the famous "Herb" Nichols at quarter, the latter going to half in that case. The next year he remained out of school, but 1912 and 1913 saw him back on the job. This year he was chosen by most judges for "all-state" quarter.

Edmund C. Leonard

Age, 22 Hght., 5:11½ Wght., 157 Birthplace, Boston, Mass.

"Ed" is another product of Oberlin High School. He occupied a guard position for two years there, and for one fall on the freshman team. When he first became eligible for college athletics, he was put in at left guard, a place which he has held for the past three seasons.

Erling C. Theller

Age, 25 Hght, 6:0½ Wght., 175 Birthplace, Horton, Norway

One of the two members of the team who can be classed as "foreign born." "Dutch" got his preparatory school workout in Oberlin Academy, where he was a veteran for three years. After captaining his freshman team, he easily made the Varsity in his second year, and stayed at left tackle for the rest of his course. Frequently he was called upon to fill in at end. This he did well and willingly, even though it may have cost him a place on the All-Ohio team.

H. Earnest Wagner

Age, 22 Height, 5:8 Weight, 138 Birthplace, Fostoria, O.

The Varsity right end never had any "prep school" experience. Not until he became a sophomore did he try his hand at the game. A member of his class team that year and the next, he went out for a position on the big team this year. After an unencouraging start, an injury to "Jimmy" Dunn let "Dick" in at end. Although he was small, light, and rather slow, his pluck and his habit of being in the path of his opponents made him a fixture at that place. The coaches never had cause to regret their choice.

Howard C. Curtis

Age, 20 Height, 5:9 Weight, 144 Birthplace, Sendai, Japan

The other one of the class "foreign born." "Molly" had only one year of experience previous to 1913. Back in 1910 he barely fought out a position on the Oberlin High School team. This fall he returned to the sport and easily cinched the hole at left end left open by "Jud" Pyle's graduation. His lack of experience is made up for by natural ability.

Ellis E. Edwards

Age, 21 Height, 5:8½ Weight, 142 Birthplace, Keene, O.

"Squirt" was the surprise of the season. Without any experience, except such as he had gained from class teams, he proved himself to be one of the best backfield men on the squad. While he did not make his "O," Coach Metcalf considered him the second best quarter in the state, and only regretted that he could not play both "Brock" and "Squirt" at once.

Willis O. Hunter

Age, 20 Hgt, 5:10½ Wgt, 150 Birthplace, Mt. Pleasant, Utah

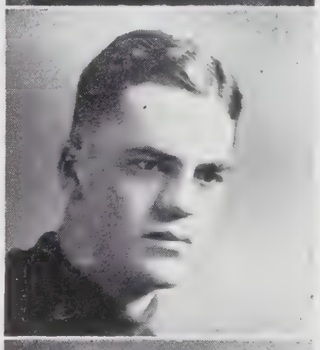

"Bill" was another surprise. With a record of never having touched the game, he went out this fall more or less as a stunt, but before the season had ended he had beaten out all his competitors at fullback. This was in spite of the fact that he was laid up for over a month as the result of an injury in the Cornell game.

Roy E. Tillotson

Age, 22 Height, 5:11½ Weight, 169 Birthplace, Oberlin, O.

With three years on the Oberlin High School team and one on the freshman eleven, "Tilly" won a position at right tackle as a sophomore. This last autumn he proved to be worthy of All-State honor. Many a sporting editor considered him the best right tackle in Ohio.

Albert H. Dunn

Age, 21 Height, 6:1 Weight, 138 Birthplace, Golden, Colo.

"Bert" was a member of the Fort Collins High School team for one year. Last year he was picked by the coaches as an "all-class" end. This fall, however, he was shifted to the halfback position, and here he alternated with Forbush, each running the other a good race.

James P. Dunn

Age, 19, Hght., 5:11 Wght., 158 Birthplace, Fort Collins, Colo.

This younger Dunn brother has the unique record of having made two touchdowns against Cornell. Two years on the Fort Collins High School team and one on the freshman eleven prepared him for his place at right end on the Varsity. An injury in the middle of the season prevented his playing in most of the later games.

Dascomb E. Forbush

Age, 19 Height, 6:0 Weight, 152 Birthplace, Riverside, R. I.

"Dack's" experience consisted of two seasons on the strong Central High team of Detroit. He came to Oberlin last spring, and made up enough school work in the summer to be eligible for the team this fall. Right halfback was his place.

Charles D. Giauque

Age, 22 Height, 6:2 Weight, 185 Birthplace, Elyria, O.

The biggest man on the squad is "Chuck" Giauque. His record is three years on Lakewood High of Cleveland, and one as an "all-class" man playing for the freshmen last season. This year he filled the position of fullback during the incapacity of Hunter.

Raymond A. Heron

Age, 21 Height, 6:0 Weight, 173 Birthplace, Livingston, Mont.

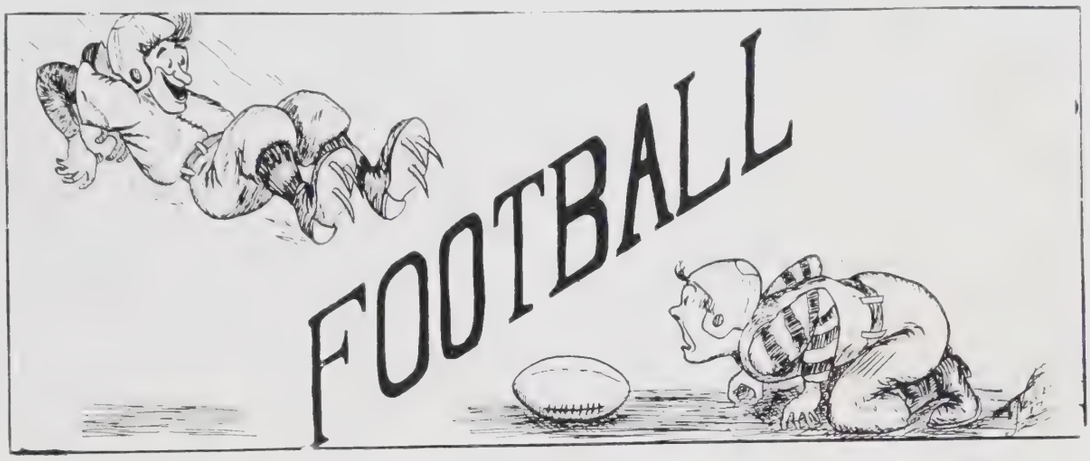

"Monty" turned up in Oberlin in 1910. He played two years for the Livingston High School team, and two more for Oberlin Academy, acting as captain when a senior there. Freshman team experience was added, and this autumn he was called upon to fill in at tackle in place of "Dutch" when the latter was working at end.

Raymond L. Lorton

Age, 21 Height, 5:9 Weight, 170 Birthplace, Springfield, O.

Here is another man who never had any experience, but just came out and learned to play. He was not considered much at the first of the season, but his showing in the Case and Reserve games showed him to be worthy of All-State mention.

HENDERSON, Captain 1914

EDWARDS, Captain 1915

Last year Oberlin was tied for the Ohio championship with Wesleyan and State. When, on the one hand, it became known that Wesleyan had all five of her regulars back and that State had lost only one man, and, on the other hand, we realized that our two crack guards, Captain Young and Pyle, had graduated, our hopes were in a very doubtful state. But the little boys of our team took as their motto: "Watch us grow!" and grow they did.

After an easy game with Kenyon, we went down to Columbus, and both overthrew our own fears and astonished every man in Ohio State University by defeating State in a thrilling game, 23-21. "Squirt" Edwards and "Molly" Curtis here demonstrated their ability to be classed with "Brock" Henderson, "Pete" Fisher, and "Dutch" Thellar as basketball players, "Squirt" shooting four baskets and holding his man to one, and "Molly" breaking even with the great Cherry—two and two. ("Bad luck" was the report that rather shame-facedly traveled up here from Columbus.) The next three games, one with Reserve, and two with Wooster, were walkaways for us. In the first Wooster contest, "Brock" made nine baskets, scoring just as many points as the whole opposing team. Then, in a combat with Rochester here, our players put up a wonderful exhibition, winning 21-14.

Here Thellar, who was forced to give up his athletics because of Senior Play duties, was replaced by Giauque. On the Eastern trip we gave Syracuse the year's hardest game on her own floor, losing by only three points, 25-22. Rochester reversed her earlier defeat by beating us 42-13. The following week, Denison came up here, and with a display of speed, accuracy and brute strength, triumphed over our boys. State, with victories over Denison and Chicago to her credit, played Oberlin in the final battle of the season. And a royal battle it was, State's height and teamwork against Oberlin's great defense and speed in going up the floor. When the closing whistle blew, State had suffered a defeat, 24-16, which ranked her, who had won second place in the Western Conference, third in the state of Ohio.

The season was highly satisfactory. It gave a fitting close to the basketball career of Captain Henderson, Fisher, and Thellar. It brought to light a pair of guards which can be ranked with the famous "Jud" and "Cy," namely, Edwards and Curtis. Above all, however, it tied us with Denison for the championship of Ohio, the last feature of a successful year. Thus, as the HI-O-HI goes to print this year, it contains the record of a nine which won the baseball championship, an eleven which tied with State for the football championship, and a five which tied with Denison for the basketball championship. Truly, this is a record of which we of Oberlin can all be proud.

KELLER, Captain 1914

COLMERY, Captain 1913

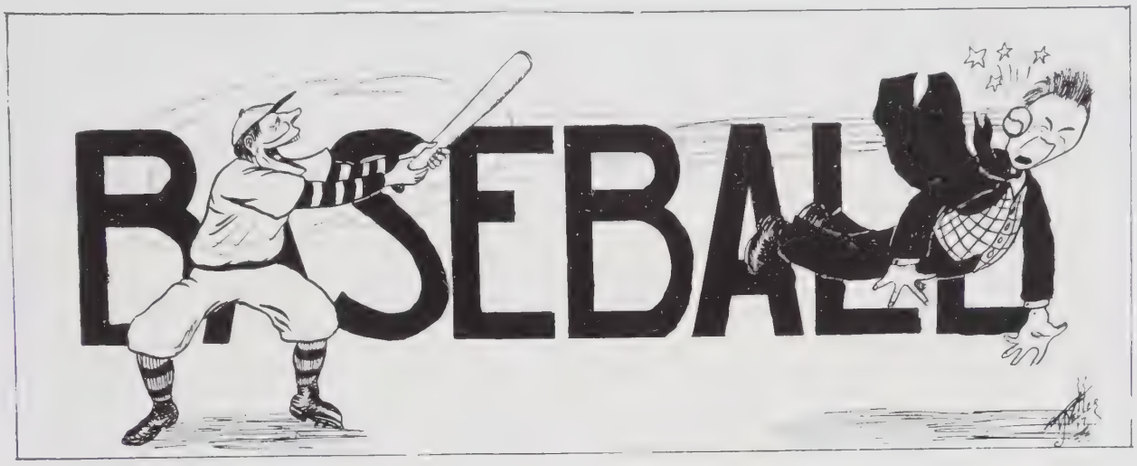

To quote our 1912 coach, "Herb" Nichols: "Captain Hans Colmery will undoubtedly lead one of the strongest aggregations which has ever represented the school." Well did he prophesy concerning a team which won a clear title to the championship of Ohio. For once in Oberlin's history, brilliant results were not the outcome of gloomy prospects, but were the direct accompaniment of the most promising outlook.

Why this success? In the first place there was "Crip" Gray as coach. This argument stands out so clear and strong that it needs no support whatever. In the second place, there was Captain Harry Colmery as the leading spirit. "Hans" was the most consistent hitter on the team, one of the best fielding shortstops in the state, and above all, a real man. Finally, and most important of all, there was that great team. Ten varsity veterans turned out for positions. There was an old "O" man for every place except catcher, where there were two. McKellogg proved to be the second pitcher of the squad, and with the loss of "Sam" Wasson in the middle of the season, his services, both in the box and at bat, were invaluable. Spore worked in with Throner at second base enough to win his "O." One likes to read the names of those veterans over and over: Colmery, Keller, Pyle, Young, Haas, Henderson, Nilson, Throner, Clarke and Wasson.

It would be tiresome to recite the long list of victories of the season. We remember how, when Oberlin defeated Case, 10 to 3, "Sam" Wasson struck out ten men and made a three-bagger himself; how, when Oberlin defeated both Kentucky State and Miami on her Southern trip, "Brock" Henderson walked up to the plate nine times and poled out eight hits; how, in the 6 to 0 defeat of Reserve, "Micky" McKellogg proved with a vengeance that he was a real baseball player, holding the Red and White to five hits and slamming out two singles and a double "on his own hook"; how En Sue, Kan Yin, Lai Tin, Ahlye, Kau, and Captain Akana of the Chinese University cleaned up their "Melikan" brothers by the score of 4 to 0; how we secured revenge on the only two Conference teams who had beaten us previously—Wooster and O. S. U.—by defeating them 6 to 4 and 19 to 4—the last being a swatfest in which Colmery starred; and finally, how, in the last game of the season, McKellogg triumphed over the great Seamans of Wesleyan in a pitchers' battle.

Before their final dispersion, the players of 1913 elected Louis Keller as Oberlin's 1914 captain. Captain Keller, Nilson, McKellogg, Henderson, Throner and Spore, the remaining veterans, certainly have the best wishes of all true Oberlinites.

It was truly a fitting close of "Crip" Gray's Oberlin career. That he who has played on and coached championship football, basketball, and track teams should at the last produce such a baseball team, is gratifying, both to "Crip" and to us. This year "Jud" Pyle takes his place as coach. His experience in the capacity of player and captain gives ample assurance of his success.

HARVEY, Captain 1914

CURTIS, Captain 1913

The track season of 1913 was a puzzle. The team, composed of some excellent material, started out at a terrific pace. It won from Wesleyan, both indoors and outdoors, and lost to State only after a close conflict, but finally surprised all Ohio's track fans by only securing fifth place in the "Big Six" at Columbus.

On March 15, the squad met O. W. U. in the Delaware gymnasium. In utter disrespect for all traditions, our boys not only defeated their opponents, but actually walloped them 70½ to 22½. (There was a tradition that Wesleyan always wins from Oberlin on her own floor.) In the return outdoor meet with O. W. U. here, the performance was repeated for the benefit of the Oberlin supporters; 77 to 40 was the score this time.

The dual meet with O. S. U. was no disappointment. There were two features which more than made up for the loss of the score, in the hope which they inspired for the "Big Six." One was "Les" Harvey's high jump of 5 ft. 11½ in., a half-inch better than the Conference record. Of course he won the discus throw, too, but a mere "first" is little to him. The other notable episode was the surprise which Thomas pulled off. In both the dashes he simply "walked away from" a man who had won both of these events in the "Big Six" the year before. Roemer, Griffith, Carter and Yocum kept up their winning streak.

Then started the list of casualties. Stimson, our broad jumper, received an injury in his leg. Thomas, the "dark horse" of the previous week, was unexpectedly disqualified by the faculty. Bruce Baxter sprained his hip. Frank Yocum was debarred from the finals of the hurdles for going over an opponent's hurdle. Harvey slipped twice while trying to jump only 5 ft. 8 in. Griffith was beaten by the man whom he had outrun the Saturday before. Lastly, "Bob" Roemer ran the two-mile in 9:50, only to have a Wooster man spring ahead at the last, possessed of an absurd desire to break the record. "Bob" forced him to do it, however. While Oberlin only got fifth place, there is some compensation in the idea underlying the following incident. Dr. Von den Steinen of Case asked a bunch of Oberlin men in the Columbus depot: "What's the matter with Oberlin? How many points did she get?" "16—just 16 times as many as Case got," came a quick reply. Those 16 points were made by Harvey, Knowles, Curtis, Roemer, Carter, Yocum and McIntosh.

With nearly all of the team back for another year of it, and with the acquisition of Dunn and Giauque of the sophomore class, prospects are indeed bright for Coach Metcalf, Captain-elect Harvey and their men. We make bold to prophesy that the new athletic field will, by permitting the "Big Six" to be held in Oberlin, usher in a new era, in which Oberlin students will realize that a big Conference track meet is as thrilling as a foo ball game, and in which track will take its place among major sports.

Just as Oberlin Academy is connected with Oberlin College, so academy athletics have a connection with college athletics. The "Cad" teams come into close touch with the Varsity athletes in practice, and in interscholastic circles, the showing which they make reacts favorably or unfavorably on the general Oberlin reputation. Morover, many of the Varsity men have derived their training and experience from this school. Captain-elect Neill, and Thellar and Heron, of the football team, and Thellar of the basketball five are worthy examples.

The football team of last fall made a bad start and, at first, several games were lost. But the crowning feature of the season was the battle with Oberlin High. The High School had won all its games and was tied with Toledo Central for the state interscholastic championship. Against such odds Captain Hudson led his men, who not only held that wonderful combination to a tie, but actually outplayed their opponents. The splendid work of Dudley and Friar and the sturdy struggling of their teammates was responsible for this result.

In basketball, Coach Edwards' players took another poor beginning, but soon pulled themselves together and won game after game, even defeating by one point the strong Toledo High five. But it was in baseball that academy athletics reached their height. Maize, the Mathewson of the Academy, held nearly all of his opponents at his mercy, with the result that a long string of victories graced the schedule. The High School was downed twice, while Akron and St. Ignatius were also among the list of unfortunates.

Throughout the present year, the influence of Coach "Phil" Edwards has been very keenly felt. Ranking with "Jud" Pyle and "Pete" Fisher as an athlete, he is in addition an excellent coach. Besides knowing all the games thoroughly, he is able to drive away discouragement from his men and to inspire them with a spirit which never gives up. Edwards must be classed with "Billy" Ament, of three years ago, as one of the finest coaches of academy athletics.

GIRLS ATHLETICS.

The what, why, when, and where of the "G. F. A." are questions which are year by year becoming of greater interest to Oberlin College women. The Gymnasium and Field Association was organized in the spring of 1904 for the purpose of providing the women of Oberlin College, Conservatory, and Academy with better recreation facilities. A few years later, Dickenson House on West College Street was purchased for the home of the association. This was renovated and fitted up as a place where its members could feel at home in a way not always possible in the boarding houses. This year the house has been open for the use of all members on Tuesday and Saturday afternoons, and for the seniors on Tuesday evenings. It is a place where members may entertain friends, do fancy-work, dance, play and sing, and even make candy. On many afternoons a grate fire and afternoon tea have added to the attraction. One of the two annual dances for the G. F. A. girls came early in the fall to give the girls a chance to get acquainted, the other in the spring. During the winter term a third dance was arranged for all girls of the college, whether members of the association or not.

With plenty of space back of the house for a hockey field and good tennis courts it would be strange indeed if these two sports did not become popular. Still, hockey has not yet been given a very enthusiastic reception. The announcement made last fall of class hockey games to be played in the spring and numerals to be granted should give the needed stimulus, for what girl does not covet the privilege of wearing her class numerals? It is to be hoped that at last Oberlin girls will discover what an excellent sport field hockey can be, and so make full use of the hockey field, along with the other privileges offered by the G. F. A.—L. R. N.

O. C. Sweaters

An "O. C." sweater is the highest individual honor that is granted to a girl by the Gymnasium and Field Association. In order to win this white varsity sweater with the "O. C." monogram in crimson and gold, a girl must fulfil one of the following requirements; she must win either:

Numerals in basketball for four years.

Numerals in three different sports.

Two numerals in one sport and one in another.

Two numerals in one sport and numerals in gymnasium.

Four girls have won their O. C.'s this year:

Genevieve Kerr, 1914, for four numerals in basketball.

Helen Jane Armstrong, 1914, for four numerals in basketball.

Anne Ramsey, 1915, for one numeral in skating, two in basketball.

Ruth Nutting, 1915, for two numerals in basketball and one in gymnasium work.

GIRLS' GYMNASIUM EXHIBITION

Rhythm and harmony are made familiar to the souls of youths, that they may grow more gentle and graceful and harmonious, and so be of service both in words and in deeds; for the whole life of man stands in need of grace and harmony.—Plato.

Russian Quadrille

Highland Fling

An indoor gymnastic exhibition was given by the women of the teachers' course in physical training in the Women's Gymnasium on the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of March, nineteen hundred and fourteen. The gymnasium was artistically decorated with garlands of roses placed effectively against a white background. The variety of folk dances in costume suggested a carnival of nations. Blithe Welsh peasant maids in broad-brimmed black hats and typical fringed and gay orange-colored skirts tripped a dance expressive of the joy of living. In direct contrast to this came a stately Russian quadrille with its slow, formal movements and sedate courtesies. The famous Highland Fling was tossed off in true national spirit. Lithe Sicilian peasant girls in yellow skirts, black velvet bodices, and queer lace headgears danced to the rhythm of jingling tambourines with grace and rapidity.

Swedish Schottische

A unique feature of the program was a Swedish Schottische pantomime dance, telling the story of a gentleman taking two ladies to a party. He devotes himself first to one, then to the other. The ladies become jealous and together decide to reprove him. Finally he conciliates them and they go home friends as before. A purely æsthetic dance, "Three Fair Maids," was one of the most beautiful dances of the evening. Dressed in fantastic black and red costumes, Hulda Stephens and Katherine Paine performed a graceful Spanish waltz.

Highland Fling

Sicilano

Marching tactics, dumb-bell, wand and Indian club drills formed another important phase of the program, while a game of indoor baseball made a lively half hour's intermission. An original number on the list was the "Valse Riband," a new dance arranged by the girls and the teachers of the department. Each couple was joined by a delicately colored streamer which they wound about their waists and then unwound in the intricate steps of the finale.

TENNIS

Tennis, always one of Oberlin's most popular out-of-door sports, was unusually so during the past season, due in part to the exceedingly propitious weather and to the early arrival of spring. The match games between the girls of the several classes were, in most cases, very close, and large crowds witnessed each game. In the class tournaments, class championships were won by Helen Smails, Senior; Alice Standish, Junior; Helen Harvey, Sophomore; and Florence Wilkinson, Freshman. In the inter-class finals the upper-class championship was won by Miss Smails for the Seniors, and the under-class championship by Miss Wilkinson for the Freshmen. The Conservatory champion, Olive Willey, defeated the Academy champion, Frances Rudolph. In the College finals Helen Smails defeated Florence Wilkinson. The final game between the Conservatory Champion, Olive Willey, and the College Champion, Helen Smails, was an exceptionally swift and interesting game. Miss Willey won two out of three sets.

The interest and enthusiasm exhibited in Tennis during the past year is only one way in which the girls show their appreciation of the facilities for playing and the splendid courts provided for them by the Gymnasium and Field Association and the Physical Training faculty.—L. P. Z.

(Tune: "Where Did You Get that Girl?")
Where did you get that team?
Princeton has it in 'er
Where did you get that team?
It surely is a winner.
Pass that ball right thru 'em,
Dodge around and fool 'em.
Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah!
Princeton, you can show 'em;
Gee, but we are proud of our team,
We love it, we love it,
Oh, goodness how we love it.
We don't need to worry,
Old Yale is in a flurry;
Oh, Oh, we have got some team.

(Tune: "When You're All Dressed Up and No Place to Go.")
When we're all dressed up and ready to play-a-a,
Life seems cheerful, happy and gay-a-a-a;
And say, ain't the dog in form tonight!
And tomorrow morning after the fight—
Among the death records you'll surely see
Where the coroner and the jury agree,
All was murder of the first degree—

Farewell

To Professor Wolfe—
Often a trial upon humanity,
Driving us sometimes almost to insanity—
Who prods us and kicks us with little restriction,
Sarcasm, irony, wounds in his diction;

To Professor Wolfe,
For helping to make our minds active and quick,
For setting all theories of good at our pick,
All rivers of knowledge at which we may drink—
For always and evermore making us think—
Our thanks are due,
Best wishes, too;
With deep regret
We bid adieu.

This man in a girl's blouse is not a girl, although his name is Nellie; although he has no wheels, he is a coach.

Disreputable Dont's

Foreword

These few hints have been gathered with the hope that they may hurt no one's feelings and yet serve as a source for amused thought for all offenders. Each "Don't" is the father of a possible though improbable lapse.

Let our latecomings not be declaimed abroad; but among ourselves let us take considerable feed thereto.

Table Dont's

Don't surprise the table by being on time. It is better to hurt a man's feelings by being late than by frightening him to death.

Don't take soup from the end of your spoon, flip it into your mouth by pressing the forefinger of the left hand firmly on the tip of the spoon and increasing the pressure by a turn of the right wrist.

Don't crumble crackers into your soup, masticate with your dental equipment. If your teeth are incapacitated, crumble under your heel on the floor.

Don't gesticulate with either knife or fork, use both.

Don't hold your knife by the blade, nor use the handle for slicing meat.

Don't overload your fork, use a tablespoon.

Don't let your spoon stand in your cup, be polite and ask it to be seated.

Don't eat vegetables with your knife if you can manage them with a spoon.

Don't converse holding a piece of bread in the air, take a bite first and talk as soon as able.

Don't bend over the table; raise the table with your knees.

Don't read "Don't Books" at the table, coach up outside.

Major-General Behavior

Don't be overfamiliar with boys—remember their hands are usually dirty and laundry is expensive in Oberlin.

Don't insult yourself by taking a gentleman's arm. It is only "antis" that are so dependent.

Don't whisper or talk in chapel—shouting attracts just as much attention.

Don't neglect to thank a person who holds a door open for you. It is possible that he isn't paid for doing it.

Don't walk four or five abreast on the street; reserve all snake dances for the sidewalk.

Don't form the habit of criticizing your food; fools and dyspeptics alone are accorded that privilege.

Matters of Speech

Don't forget that because you are majoring in English you are not supposed to use "Good English" freely.

Don't say "fool" for "idiot."

Don't say "Yep" for "Yes, ma'am."

Don't say "Get me?" for "Did you catch the drift of the avalanche that detached itself from my storehouse of information and rolled its ponderous course down the steep of my sharpened lingual member?"

Don'ts for Men

Don't ever take a girl seriously—she does that for herself; when she takes you seriously you won't be sane enough to be serious.

Don't never get to saying, "Don't," it's a nefarious habit.

Fisher—"I feel like everything."
Harvey—"What have you been eating?"
Fisher—"Hash."

Prexy—"Barbarians live in one place until it becomes too dirty, and then move."
Jelliff—"Say, roomy, let's move."

Prof. Geiser (in Municipal Government class)—"There is something inspiring about sailing into one of those North Italian ports on a transcontinental steamer."

FIRST TIME HOME

He—"Father, how do you like this new hat? I bought it on your account."
Father—"By the looks of your bank book, it appears that is how you buy everything."

Sophomore Man (morning after Case Rally)—"That sure was some rally last night."
Freshman Girl—"And did Case really win?"
Soph. Man—"No, they haven't played yet, what made you think so?"
Fresh. Girl—"O, I heard everybody singing, 'What in the what do we care?' "

It was the fourth call in two weeks. Dean Miller—"If I have to call you up again, I will feel forced to put you on probation."
Sophomore—"But, Mr. Miller, I'm trying."
Dean Miller—"Yes, very."

General Misinformation

History and Location

Oberlin Cottage was established in 1833, about eight miles west of Elyria in Lowrain County, upon a tract of land part of which sometimes appears above water. On account of the beautiful streams which traverse the streets, Oberlin has been called the "Venice of America." It is reached at all times by water, at mealtimes by the Lunge, Shake, and Move Slowly Railroad, and at lucid intervals by the Curved and Shockingwrocker Electric line. After various attempts to drain the former campus, the town has been beautified by the creation of a beautiful fresh-water lake. Students in Geology no longer are forced to swim the campus, but are provided with canoes.

Purpose

The purpose of the Cottage as stated in the revised charter is: "To efficiently improve the students in the social graces, and to democratically promote their general happiness." Since 1915 the proceeds of the Cottage endowment have been devoted to the support of the village of Oberlin and Lowrain County.

Advantages

As will be seen by consulting the names of the faculty and the departments in which they offer instruction, the Cottage is prepared to provide any course that two or more students desire to elect, the teacher being chosen by the students, subject to immediate dismissal for any interference with social activities. In this last feature Oberlin stands as a pioneer in America. The system has resulted efficiently in reducing the amount of work done to a minimum.

Other advantages that may be mentioned are a new motor speedway from Oberlin to Vermillion, much used by the students, and the recently enlarged playhouse of the Oberlin Dramatic Association. The village also contains a vaudeville house giving continuous performances, and the Hobbs famous triple combination of theater, cafe, and dance hall. The Cottage also owns and operates the Park Hotel with its magnificent grill room where the service is superb. Since the village is supported entirely by the school, there has developed a special atmosphere of culture and luxury that enables the students to absorb the true social graces toward their equals without interfering with their conscious superiority to the common herd. At the same time, the Cottage does not offer itself as a training-school for the newly rich; its facilities are offered only to those who to aristocratic birth and breeding wish to add the highest possible polish and culture. For this purpose, classes in midnight serenading, meeting four times a week, are free to all. The large number of aspirants makes possible the worst chorus work; the Third Church Choir and the Erratical Onion furnish valuable opportunities for practice in these fields.

Admission and Relegations

Admission is granted only to students presenting a regular diploma from a properly accredited finishing school, who must in addition pass an examination with credit upon the Oberlin Don't Book. Any student committing an offense against one of the Don'ts during the first six months of his study in Oberlin may be relegated to the home farm, at the discretion of the student body.

Bureau of Dates

The Cottage endeavors to provide for all students adequate social advantages, and to this end maintains a Bureau of Dates which provides for needy students and those who are backward in coming forward engagements for every evening in the week. This Bureau has proved an efficient feature in making it impossible for any male student to escape from the Cottage without having been proposed to at least six times.

The Only Heart Collection

The only Heart Collection was the gift of an anonymous donor. It comprises 290 bronzes and brasses; 235 hearts of fickleness; 238 hearts of ivory, slightly yellowed; 55 pearl, horn, and coral, more or less worn; 110 hearts of alabaster, crystal, soapstone, and jade, mostly chipped; 5,000 ornamental and semiprecious hearts; 30 hearts of putty, dough and fudge; 1 perfect heart, exceedingly rare, besides other amusing accessories. The value of the collection is estimated conservatively at 113,000 men. The key to the Only Heart Collection may be secured at any time from the Secretary of the Bureau of Dates. It must, however, be understood that the Cottage has no responsibility for, or connection with, any matrimonial bureau.

Hi Popolorum

A chapter of Hi Popolorum, the national society whose fundamental aim is to protect the flunkers, was established in Oberlin in 1914, the first time the necessity for it was felt. Each year approximately one-eighth of the Senior Class qualifies for membership by flunking all courses. The Oberlin Chapter is known as the Beetit Chapter of Ohio, and numbers (May 15, 1939) about five hundred and six living members, five hundred of these being members of the faculty.

Horticultural Contests

Each year the students conduct a Horticultural Contest open to all undergraduates. For this a prize has been established, furnished by the income from what is called the Conscience Fund, contributed by three anonymous graduates of the classes of 1914 and 1915. The student who presents the most successful moustache received first prize of fifty dollars, the next most successful one twenty-five dollars. It is customary for the winners to pool the proceeds and go get a shave.

Students Leaving the Oberlin Business College Building as School is Dismissed

This school is having one of the most prosperous years in its history. It has outgrown its present building and a new one is being erected on the next lot south, which will be completed by the opening of the Fall Term, Sept. 8, 1914. With the two buildings, connected by a covered passage-way, Oberlin will have a Business College the equipment of which is not surpassed by any school of its kind in this country.

A Futurist's Dream of the Library

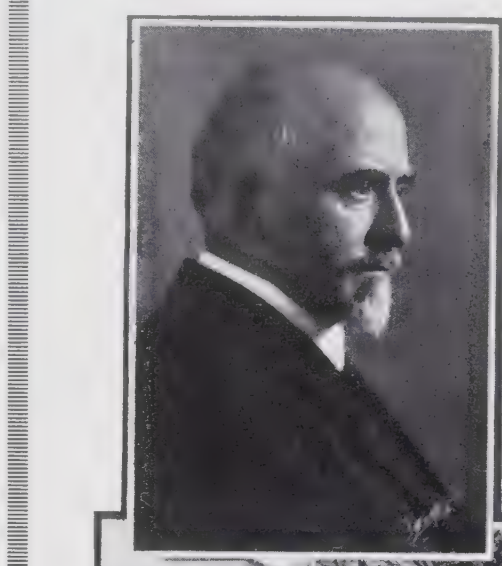

Freshman—"Got back my first Eng. Comp. theme today."
Senior—"What did it say?"
Freshman—"It was so marked up I couldn't make much out of it, but down at the end it said, 'Only the first sentence pertains to the subject.' "
Senior—"So you have Miss Ward, have you?"

The President of the Freshman Class had called upon a young lady and asked permission to call later.
Freshman Lady—"Really, I never could marry a short fat man."

Prof. Jameson (on first day of school)—"I shall endeavor to learn your faces as I call the roll. Miss Alexander, E. C. Andrus, W. D. Andrus—O, you're both here; I give up."

DEAR BEAUTY DOCTOR:
I would like to know what to do when I send flowers to a young lady and she wears them for a date with another man. MICKEY MCKELLOGG.

Matter—"What day is that?"
Dipman—"Monday."
Matter—"Mr. Chairman, I move we postpone it until March 2."

Freshman (as she accosts Prof. Hall at Peters)—"Pardon me, but are you Dr. Hanna?"

Nickerson (in Psychology class)—"Mr. Wells, do you consider that the excessive development of the cerebral hemispheres retards the growth of the hair?"
Mr. Wells (after prolonged laughter)—"I think that the point has already been demonstrated."

Kind Upper-class Woman—"Do you want to find the Dean's office?"
Freshman Maid—"No, I have to."

Prof. Wager (after discussing minor characters in Vergil)—"We will now return to more important persons. For instance, Mr. Davis—"

Cy Buell—"John, what are you going to do when you get out of here?"
Herring—"I think I'll go to Western Reserve to study law, and come back here to argue my cases."

The Aftermath of Shansi

We dare not look at Sperry's,
  Where, heaped in bright array,
Grapefruit, apples, olives fine
  Our hunger tempting, lay;
For now we turn our heads aside,
  And look the other way,
Our money's gone to China,—
  We pledged it Shansi Day.

The shining rows of doughnuts,
  Rolls, cakes, and candies, too,
In Hobbs' new window tempt our eyes,
  But they're likewise "taboo."
We cannot have our breakfasts
  "Above," as we used to do;
For our money's gone to Shansi,
  And our "feeds" have gone there, too.

And every night we trip along,
  Fair Oberlin's "Broad White Way"
We close our eyes and heave our sighs,
  For we lack the dime to pay.
We hear the organ grinding,
  Up in the roller rink,
But our money's gone to China
  And we haven't got the "chink."

We'd love to go to Ohly's,
  And have a "hot fudge dope"
Or have an egg at the Tea-rooms,
  But it's not for us to mope.
Our money's gone to China,
  For we simply had to pay
When "Prexy" got to talking
  Upon our Shansi Day.

At our store you will find standardized merchandise at reasonable prices. We represent only the best manufacturers.

Our Hosiery Department features the best numbers in the Wayne Knit, Onyx, and Burlington lines. Prices range from 10c to $2.00 per pair. We make a specialty of Silk Hosiery.

You will find that Globe Tailor-made Underwear, for which we are agents, is better than any other knit underwear at similar prices.

Satisfaction is assured if you buy Meyer's Silk Gloves.

We pay special attention to our corset stock. You will find the popular styles in Warner's, Nemo, Thompson's Glove Fitting, C. B., La Resista, P. N. and Ferris Waists.

Puritan Muslin Underwear is desirable because it is made in a sanitary factory. It satisfies discriminating buyers in every particular.

Our assortment of Ladies' Neckwear, Fancy Trimmings, and all Staple Notions, is complete and carefully selected.

We take pains to please our patrons

NOT IN THE CATALOGUE

The bell doth ring for everything,
It says in the Catalogue;
But why doesn't it tell that with the bell
Comes the howl of the three-legged dog?

The choir doth sing like everything,
It says in the Catalogue,
But it does not say that with this lay
Comes the howl of that three-legged dog.

Freshman man (to Mrs. Lawrence as Gereke rushes through the dining-room at Talcott)—"Is that the man proprietor of this place?"

New Student—"Do they keep boarders long at Pyle's?"
Old Student—"No, they keep them thin and they look long."

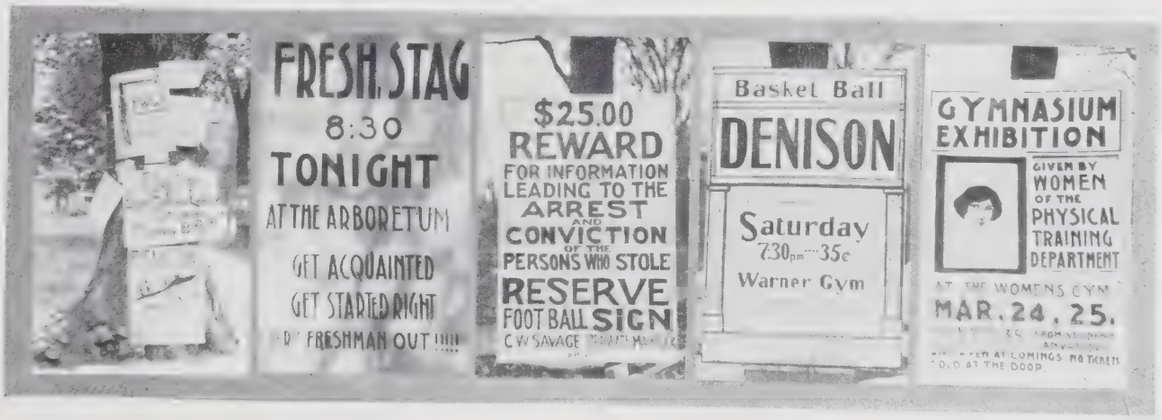

Mrs. Baker (reading aloud a letter from Jessie)—"I went to a basketball game last night with Kenyon."
Mr. B.—"Well, who on earth is Kenyon? I thought she said his name was Clare."

First Talcott Girl—"Did you know Howard Husted was a somnambulist?"
Second Talcott Girl—"No; is he?"
First Talcott Girl—"Well, he always takes a Knapp when he walks."

Fifield was crossing the campus and singing, "You Made Me Love You—" Just then he struck some ice and spilt, and continued: "But I didn't want to do it, no I didn't want to do it!"

Prof. Geiser—"Mr. Fisher, what did the French Revolution do?"
Pete—"It did away with class distinctions forever."

Senior Girl (as Chuck Giauque puts the shot at the Freshman-Sophomore meet)—"Oh, I always did like to see fellows pole-vault that way."

STYLE

In every age dress has expressed the spirit of the times as the seasons come and go.

My organization is one of the first to comprehend the true significance of foreshadowed changes, first to present authentic style-plates for the guidance of those who want the right apparel at the right time.

Style is a subtle something that can only be imparted by the artistic tailor. It is a part of the technic of the fine tailoring as exemplified by McLachlan Clothes.

Just as every individual possesses a manner — a style peculiar to himself or herself—so each suit of clothes I make is individual. That is why hundreds of the best-dressed people in Cleveland are steady patrons of my shop. They "like my style."

Bill Reeder (putting on her rubbers)—"There you are, Miss Wilson!"
She—"O, William! when you stop calling me Miss Wilson?"
He—"Only when I can call you Mrs. Reeder."

Alice Henderson (studying Ornithology)—"What's the bird that goes 'Peter-peter-peter'?"
Audrey Hayden—"Why, that must be me."

Prof. Wolfe (when asked to repeat, after a long and weighty discussion of his own views)—"Why, I couldn't if I tried! What did I say, anyway?"

Bernice Bettman—"They say that Billy Sunday has been in Cincinnati."
Sally Bailey—"I do wish some good shows would come here."

Clare Vrooman (unconscious that he had been elected Spade orator)—"George Tucker came up and congratulated me this morning. I couldn't think what it was for. He congratulated me a couple of weeks ago on everything I could think of."

Prof. Hutchins (in Freshman Bible)—"Would Paul have opposed or favored the American Revolution?"
Nickerson—"Well, I think it would have depended on whether he was American or English."

They were discussing the age of the Talcott cat. M. Dewey—"That cat was only a puppy last year."

Mary—"The Dean has got to know me too well. When I come back next fall I guess I'll register under some assumed name. Could you suggest a good one?"

Roommate (who knew Mary)—"Judging from appearances, you will have a good selection, if they are all willing."

Prof. Caskey (in Oratory class)—"O, Mr. Tucker! can't you speak louder than that? Put some life into your delivery. Open your mouth and throw yourself into it."

Hoax—"I thought you said Jones was a musician."
Joax—"Nonsense!"
Hoax—"You certainly told me he wrote melodies."
Joax—"I told you he was a composer of heirs. He sells Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup."

First Freshman—"Prof. Sherman! I can't place him. What color is his hair?"
Second Freshman—"Skin color."

What are You Worth?

Is your "Income" more than $3,000 per year? You are worth all you can earn; therefore "What can you do?" is the question you should answer.

If forced to earn your own living, what could you do thoroughly enough to earn a good salary and a chance for advancement?

The Elyria Business College has trained hundreds of young men and women each year for positions as Teachers, Private Secretaries, Stenographers, Bookkeepers, Shop Clerks, etc.; the demand for our graduates is always greater than the supply, and the chances for advancement are unlimited.

This is because our graduates make good and are able to do the work the business man wants done.

Much of this success is due to our system of Individual Instruction which encourages every student in the Elyria Business College to complete the course in the shortest time consistent with good work.

If you are interested in securing an education which will make you independent for life, ask for full information and enroll today. Students may enroll any day in the Bookkeeping Department of the Elyria Business College, and on the first Monday of each month in the Stenographic Department, taking either Graham Shorthand or Stenotypy, "The Machine Way in Shorthand."

Send us the addresses of friends who may take a business course in the near future, and we will send you some beautifully written calling cards.

The A. B. CHASE "Baby Grand" recently bought of you is a splendid instrument. I am delighted with it in every way. It is now five years that I have used these instruments not only in private instruction, but for public concerts and for my own practice as well, and invariably with the utmost satisfaction.

Gentlemen: I can only repeat what I have said years ago. The A. B. CHASE Piano is a beautiful instrument, of which every owner, and every musician, and you, may be proud.

Their Concert Grand surprised me. It is a magnificent product of the art of Piano building.

Afterword

More than a year ago we began the preparation of this book. As we studied the problem of the college annual, three aims emerged which have directed our work. First, the book should represent fully all the organized activities of the college life. In the second place, it should reflect intimately the student life of the school. Finally, it should present this material in artistic and systematic form. Two sometime features of the college annual do not appear. The pictures do not represent any one bunch or set. Further, after careful study of the situation, we have practically eliminated the "fussing" picture. We at least will no longer make the normal friendships of the men and women of Oberlin a target for the world's humor.

Our heartiest thanks are due to a multitude of faculty and students who have assisted in the work, especially to those who have given time and thought to the various "write-ups" throughout the book, and to the artists who, with no place on the board, have done hard work to help us. That a college annual should make a "scoop" is hardly to be expected, but by Dean Bosworth's kindness we have been able to present to the Oberlin students for the first time pictures of the country of John Frederick Oberlin. The use of the revised plans for the campus and the perspective of the Art Building is the contribution of President King.

We are also indebted to Mr. John R. Leiter for his faithful labor in producing the complete photographic record of the events of the year. Mr. Leiter has put his skill and experience into the work, and has given much of his personal time to the production of these pages. The thanks of every reader of the book are due him for his work.

Finally, we have to recognize the work of the "Associates," who were appointed to gather material for the Annual among the several boarding-houses. With their names our afterword must close. The 1915 Hi-O-Hi is in your hands. We hope that you will find as much pleasure in reading it as we have found in its preparation.

Service

+ quality

Is what we aim to give our customers. The printing establishment rendering the best service—pleasing the most customers—winning new ones and growing every year, is the one rendering quality service.

Many of our clients realize this, and that accounts for our large and increasing business. This book is a sample of what can be produced in an up-to-date establishment in a very few days.

Let us demonstrate what we can do for you.
